GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE

It would be difficult to find a theme that would better describe the real reason for the pursuit of advanced education than the one selected by the "Statesman." "Striving for Excellence" is more than a mere grouping of words and substantially more than just a title. This theme reflects a way of life; a philosophy for both individuals and groups.

We live, today, in a world where excellence is at a premium. Employers vie for individuals on the top rung of the ladder of accomplishment. Universities seek teachers with proven records of academic prowess. Medical schools give preference to students with exceptional undergraduate backgrounds. In every field of endeavour the individual who seeks, even while being sought after, has a proven record of excellence behind him.

As time passes our world changes and so do our needs. Technologies become more complex and the thinking that may be adequate for today's problems becomes obsolete a few years hence. Goals as we once knew them were static concepts—fixed, in the sense that they waited for men to arrive.

No more. Goals are fluid and they move ever forward. And the people who reach them need not be our most brilliant; they must of necessity, however, be those who are "Striving for Excellence."

Cross Country

The District 31 N.A.I.A. Cross-Country Championship was won by our own hurrying Hornets! It was a meaningful climax to the careers of seniors Charlie Saunders and Rayford Johnson. Off to a slow start due to injuries and quitting members, the squad lost the first two meets to Maryland State and Glassboro. Then the tide reversed itself, and we watched the Hornets capture their second district championship in four years. We're proud of you, fellows.

Ted works out.

Tyrone shows off.

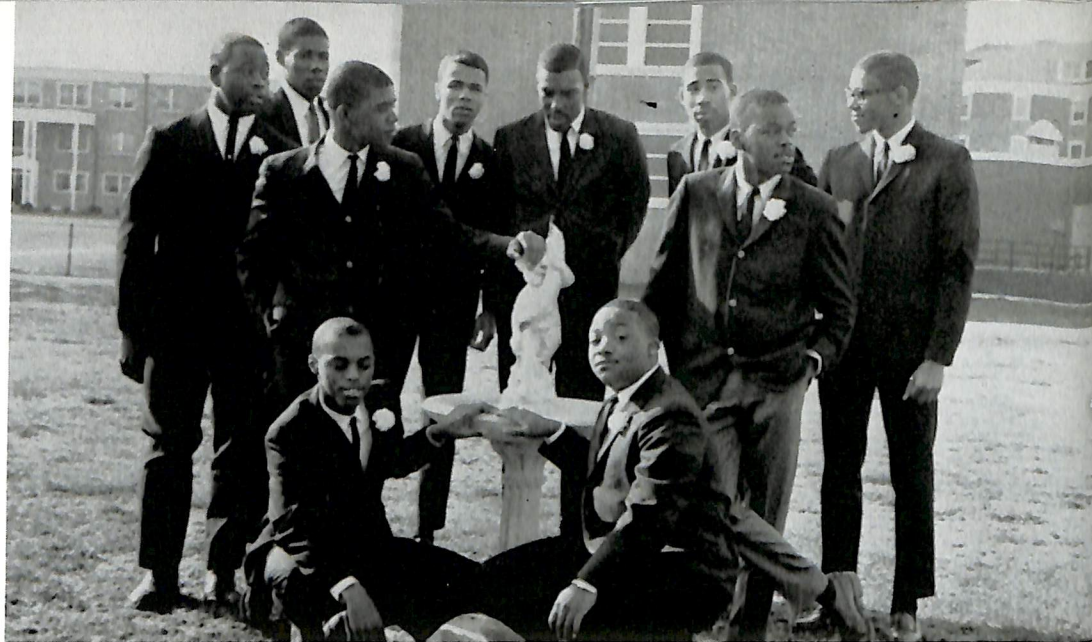

The Grooves are new on Delaware's campus, and call themselves a social organization. From what we have witnessed of their behavior on campus, we are looking for the day when the Panhellenic Council admits a new member to its ranks—Gamma Phi Gamma!

DEDICATION

As we dust off the memories of our college days we can visualize vividly the experiences which made college the most significant segment of our lives—the romantic aloofness of a couple at a spring prom, the wild exuberance of the Homecoming game, symbolize only the superficial values of the college experience. It is the cultivation of the mind which proves to be the most valuable end product of our education.

There is no more noticeable difference than that between the knowing and the unknowing individual. The transition from adolescence to adulthood can be largely attributed to the dedicated efforts of our good teachers; because of them we can count ourselves with the knowing.

A good teacher is as much a product of our time as the atom bomb, rockets to the moon, Lenny Bruce, James Baldwin, CORE, Tennessee Williams, Miles Davis, James Dean, and hootenannies. He has emerged to underline today's moods of awareness and anger, of restlessness, militancy, and hope.

A good teacher does not stand still. He has a natural curiosity and scholarship that will make him keep pace with all aspects of our changing world along with those of his specialty. He sets standards. He forms tastes. He needs to be a moral, decent, thoroughly trustworthy person if he is to be trusted with the guidance of the young.

Every good teacher has a sense of "cause" and of service. It is a little more than ordinary public spirit. It is rather a faith in human perfectibility. Society has need of a social cement to hold it together; this function the good teacher can serve. In the words of Henry Adams, "A teacher affects eternity. He never can tell where his influence stops."

It is to a man of great cause and great service humbly done that we dedicate the 1965 STATESMAN. To Mr. John Robert Price, in gratitude . . .

. . . a long, lonely road

EDITOR'S MESSAGE

It's a long, hard, frustrating, and often terribly lonesome road that leads to a yearbook. For this yearbook—the 1965 STATESMAN—the road has been especially rough because there was no well-worn track from previous years to follow.

We have omitted, we know, many who deserve to be here represented. Part of this is attributed to inexperience, part to our photographer's failure to meet deadlines, part to your failure to take us seriously, but much of the blame must rest on our shoulders.

Still, the road had not been taken before, and we ask your tolerance in accepting the 1965 STATESMAN as a job not well done, perhaps, but done.
