General Remarks.

The college is established and maintained by appropriations from the Federal and State governments. It is located two miles north from Dover, the state capitol on the Loockerman farm a tract of about one hundred acres. The facilities for instruction are an ample equipment of chemical and philosophical apparatus of modern and approved character and a work shop which is amply fitted up with tools and machinery for teaching the industrial arts. These include a large boiler and engine, lathe, drill press, shaper, forges, and carpenter's benches; with the necessary tools for iron and wood working, and a set of farrier's tools. A plant for electric light has also been installed. The shop will be opened at the beginning of the fall term, and will be under the charge of a competent instructor, and will be kept running throughout the college year. Thus facilities are afforded for acquiring skill in the trades—carpentry, blacksmithing, carriage making etc.

The farm not only furnishes adequate facilities for instruction in the various branches of agriculture and horticulture, but also provides labor for the industrious student, who by this means and the long summer vacation, may earn a large part of his expenses, by his own exertions, during his college course.

The library contains several hundred volumes, selected with special reference to the needs of the student; and additions will be made to it, from time to time, of the best and most useful modern books. Students have free access to the library under proper restrictions.

A flourishing literary society has been organized and is a great help and mental stimulus to the members.

Military drill is required of able bodied students. A neat uniform of cadet gray has been adopted. While its use is not compulsory the students will find it economical and it adds much to the appearance and enthusiasm of a military company.

Discipline is administered by the Faculty, the requirements being gentlemanly behavior on the part of all students.
