DelState Celebrates Black History Month with Impressive Activities

By Joann Major

"Black History brings blacks together; in essence furnishing them with an identity of antecedents. A community of remembrances and a sense of collective pride and humiliation, pleasure and pain, all based on a shared past...The study and propagation of Black History has liberating qualities. It liberates the will, inspiring its devotees and girding them for the struggles that lie ahead."

Benjamin Quarles.

For the past 61 years, Black History Month has been observed during the month of February. During this occasion, a lot of attention is drawn to the achievements of Blacks. The question that ponders the minds of many is why the month of February?

The month of February has always been important in the United States. It is the month of Saint Valentine's Day as well as that of the birth of Abraham Lincoln and George Washington. To Afro-Americans, this month has a special meaning. Records show that neither Frederick Douglass nor Booker T. Washington knew the exact day of his birth, but for years the birthdays of both of these distinguished black leaders have been celebrated in February. Dr. W.E. Dubois, another outstanding Black leader, was also born in February.

"The celebration of Negro History Month," wrote Dr. Carter G. Woodson, late director of The Association For the Study Of Negro Life And History, "is something new. It is a thought that emerged from my mind."

Believing that people throughout the country were interested, Dr. Woodson communicated with outstanding men and women of the black race who encouraged the effort in every way possible. Carrying the word to their constituents, they soon made it a matter of common knowledge that "February would be generally observed as the occasion for directing attention to the achievements of the Negro."

Selecting as its theme for Black History Month 88, "The Constitutional Status of Black Americans in the 20th Century," the members of Delaware State College Black Studies Advisory Committee have scheduled many interesting films, discussions and speakers to make students aware of the contributions of Black Americans.

Gwendolyn Braxton, assistant academic dean and coordinator of the Black Studies Program for the last two years, said that in order to get the students' participation, most of the activities will be held in the dormitories.

Students are asked to support these programs and to come out and learn about the history of Black people who have become an integral part of our every-day lives.

The Black Studies Advisory Committee comprises Dr. Etta Hollands, Dr. Kofi Blay, Dr. Elise Braithwaite, Mrs. Jean Ramsey Smith, Dr. Anne Jenkins, Mr. Milton Cooper, Dr. James Scott King, and Dr. damus Kenjyatta.

Below is a list of activities scheduled for Black History Month, 1988:

— February 2, 7:00 p.m. "The Marva Collins Story," Tubman Hall. Film and discussion. Discussion Leader, Dr. Etta Hollins.

— February 3, 7:00 p.m. Dramatic Production, MLK Student Center, Main Lounge. "Emerged." A play featuring D.S.C. Faculty and Students, directed by Dr. damus Kenjyatta.

Living the Dream

lives of people everywhere were touched in some good way by his work. For our national holiday and in honor of Martin's work, the Martin Luther King, Jr. Federal Holiday Commission with your cooperation initiated a "Freedom Trail." The holiday Freedom Trail, symbolically, wound its way across our nation and around the world. And, as more and more people committed to joining the Freedom Trail, each of us was able to experience the good feelings that came with knowing that we have, in some small way, through our words and deeds contributed to living the dream of Martin Luther King, Jr.

Our nation's holidays are special days. Some are days of remembrance and some are days of celebration. Let Black History Month be a time TO CELEBRATE in the true spirit of togetherness and community; and most importantly, let it be a catalyst for individuals, families, organizations, and communities TO ACT — to live the dream by serving the causes of equality, justice, freedom, and peace.

Every year, January and February, we will participate in and experience, an American tradition, the observance of our national holiday honoring Martin Luther King, Jr. and Black History month. The ringing success of these holidays is due to people, young and old, here and around the world, recognizing and acknowledging the invaluable contribution Blacks have made to all our lives. You, the people, individually and through your organizations, unselfishly have given of your time and resources and helped to create a national spirit of unity for the holidays.

Martin's work took him to communities all across our nation and around the world. He traveled a trail of freedom and the

Prof. Bassols Decries Low Enrollment in Western Art

By Eugene Butler

"Students at Delaware State College are always complaining that this school does not offer enough classes on black heritage or black art, but we (DelState) are offering a class in western art this semester and only five students have enrolled," said assistant art professor Arturo Bassols.

"The western art course stresses mostly African and Indian art along with some American art," added Bassols.

The course is being offered for the first time in ten years, and there is no prerequisite. The course can also be used to satisfy one of the humanities requirements.

Bassols, who has taught at DelState for 14 years, contends that most students will not take the class because they do not want to do the work, read the assignments, or especially "write a paper" dealing with art.

In rebuttal to the low number of enrollment for the class, Ramoni Ashiru, a Nigerian transfer student from Temple University, said maybe the course was not advertised enough, noting that the Art Department should have advertised in the school newspaper and on posters to inform students about the new course.

"I have always included black artists in my teachings," noted Bassols. "Black, pink, or white, an artist is still an artist," Bassols defended his beliefs and classroom procedures.

The western arts course is being considered as a course that could be offered year-round, but that decision will be made based on future enrollment. Meanwhile, the course is slated to be offered every summer.

Female Resident Manager at Conwell Hall

By Chantal Davis

Jacqueline Magee, a 1980 graduate of Delaware State, was recently promoted to resident manager of Conwell Hall, a male dormitory. Being a former student Magee realizes what students need. She wants to make Conwell as comfortable as possible, and to help the students in any way possible.

Ms. Magee described the atmosphere of Conwell as "very warm." She referred to the guys in the dormitory as her "sons," noting that they are very friendly.

When asked why she wanted to become a resident manager, she said she realizes how much guidance the students need. As a resident manager, she would like to design a program to help them with their goals, such as helping them with their resumes. She also believes a resident manager should be able to plan things for the students.

Magee noted that the residents treat her with respect. At first, she thought they would have problems with a female resident manager. But they talk to her about their problems as they would to a male resident manager.

Willis Lonzer, a junior and resident of Conwell, said of Ms. Magee, "I feel Ms. Magee is a competent manager and she brings that motherly quality to Conwell. I think under her administration, Conwell will continue to be the finest men's dormitory."

Curtis Williams, a sophomore said, "I feel it's a position that will help other females to feel they are equal to males. Compared to the resident managers before, she is more into and aware of what's going on in the dorm and around campus."

Foreign Language Lab

By Darryl Lovett

Is there a foreign language lab on campus? Who uses it? Except you are a foreign language major, you may not know the answers to these questions.

Yes, there is a foreign language laboratory on campus. The Language Lab, as it is called, is located in Room 257, in the Education & Humanities Center building.

Although attached to the Department of Foreign Languages, the lab is open to any DSC student, regardless of his or her major. At the beginning of each semester, interested students are taught how to use the lab equipment and other facilities.

Besides listening to tapes of various foreign languages, a student can watch foreign movies, read newspapers and magazines in several foreign languages, besides other activities offered by the department.

Eva Dula, director of the Lab, said that most students find the facility very useful because "classroom time is limited, so students come to the lab to increase their studies. In the lab, students work on their lab assignments."

Mrs. Dula also said, "Students feel at ease and it is an informal type situation. The students are not pressured."

Fillipo Toscano, assistant professor of Spanish and Italian, said the purpose of sending his students to the lab is to give them "personalized attention." Mr. Toscano, who is also acting chairman of the Foreign Languages Department, added that in the classroom, students hear only one accent out in the lab, they get to hear other accents.

About the way the lab is being run, Mr. Toscano noted, "Eva Dula is a very distinguished person and indispensable to the department." Another instructor, Ms. Rosemarie Gaeske, who teaches German, also said that Mrs. Dula was not only a hard worker but also handled the lab properly.

The lab hours are 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Psychology & Sociology Depts. Move to Delaware Hall

By Darryl Lovett

Delaware Hall has been renovated to be used for classes by the Sociology and Psychology departments. The Hall, first occupied in 1927, has not been used for the last 20 years. For years, discussions were held and funding sought by the college to have the historic building renovated. Before his retirement, Dr. Luna I. Mishoe, former DelState's president, gave the green light for its renovation.

Edward T. Crawford, vice president for Fiscal Affairs, said last semester that the building's renovation was completed and "all it needs is for the people to move into it." But Dr. Albert B. Miller, professor of Psychology and chairman of the Psychology Department, said the building still needs some minor work, such as checking the heating and air conditioning.

Mr. Crawford said that the building has several labs and other equipment. In the past, the Hall was used for classes in Chemistry, Psychology and Sociology; however, other classes will also use the building, he noted.

When asked about the renovation made, Dr. Miller said, "Renovations have immensely improved quality of the institutional facilities and will have a significant input on the quality of the program of Psychology and Sociology, and I am eagerly looking forward to moving back." Both the Sociology and Psychology departments are moving back after a long two-year wait.

One major change made by the renovation is that the old auditorium has been changed into the building's first and second floors with additional offices and classrooms.

Sociology Dept. is on the Move

By Jean E. Wilson

The Department of Sociology at Delaware State College held its first meeting for the Spring Semester on January 28, 1988. The meeting was conducted by Dr. Kofi Blay, Associate Professor of Sociology and Faculty Advisor for the Sociology Club.

New officers were elected for the Sociology Club. The new officers are Vincent Telfare, President, Joe King and Myron Bogan, Vice Presidents, Sheila Cain, Secretary, Heidi Wuller, Asst.

Secretary, Jean E. Wilson, Treasurer, and Arnold Downing, Asst. Treasurer. Vincent Telfare and Leila Grubbs will be student representatives for the department.

Mrs. Olivia W. Washington, Assistant Professor of Sociology and Chairperson of the Department of Sociology, invites everyone to visit the newly renovated Delaware Hall on campus. There is a quiet student lounge for students to relax and study. Mrs. Washington feels that the faculty and staff in Delaware Hall have a lot to offer to the students entering and presently at Delaware State College. The department offers both a major and a minor in the field of Sociology, with a selection of three options.

Students interested in information about the Sociology Department should go to the main office in Delaware Hall, Room 122 or call 736-5212. If you would like to talk to a faculty member, each instructor has their own office hours and are looking forward to helping you in and out of the classroom.

DelState Promotes International Students Association

By Joseph Dumizo

The International Student Association of Delaware State College is now an active organization on campus. The objectives of this Association are to promote interest, and deal with the problems of foreign students at Delaware State College, as well as to promote an International Cultural Awareness Program at Delaware State College and the entire Dover community.

The Association's plan of action for this academic year is as follows:

1. To bridge the cultural differences between Americans and foreign students through:

a. Hornet Newspaper publication of our cultural identities values, and beliefs literally expressed with intention to introduce students to the way people of foreign countries live, work, and play.

b. The college radio station WDSC-AM 63. A broadcast time that will be devoted to International music, information and linguistic exchanges. This will be of benefit to foreign language majors as well as the entire student listeners.

2. To welcome International students at port of arrival.

3. Treat the entire Delaware State College students and Dover community to an International Food Fair and dance.

4. To form a soccer team and participate in college soccer leagues.

5. To promote and encourage the International recruitment of foreign students to Delaware State College.

6. To introduce to Delaware State College an International Arts exhibit.

7. To encourage academic debates.

a. Who discovered America; the Indians or Christopher Columbus?

b. Why was this country not named the United States of Christopher Columbus?

8. And much, much more.

We'll begin our publications in the next issue of the student newspaper. All interested students are welcome. For more information, contact the office of Dean of Student Services at 736-4944; or Joseph Dumizo, President of the International Student Association.

In the next issue of the Hornet, there will be the first of a series of articles about the pros and cons on campus. I started gathering information and talking to different people in November of 1987.

The incentive that I received to do such an article came from some of my own personal experiences on campus and from other students, as well as faculty and staff members. I promise you that no one will have their name or names appear in the series of articles.

If you would like to contribute to this article, in an honest way, I am willing to meet with you. Keep in mind that we have come a long way and still have a long way to go.

The first of four articles will be entitled "Does B.D. mean Big Deal or Business Department?" Please be sure to read the next issue of the Hornet.

There is a Special Day For Sweethearts

By Henry Kellogg

February 14 is a special day for sweethearts. It was once thought to be the time of year when birds began to mate and a chubby little love god named Cupid aimed his arrows at the hearts of young men and women. Many people believed that their future happiness was somehow connected with valentine festivities.

According to the New World Encyclopedia, celebrations have been traced back to a Roman festival called the Lupercalia. On that day, all the young girls put their names in a box and each young man drew out a name to pick his sweetheart for the next year.

During the Middle Ages, people believed birds found their mates on February 14. So the day was set aside to honor all lovers. The people found new ways to celebrate the day. For example, they used to kiss the "first met;" that is, the first young woman whom a young man happened to meet on that day.

By chance, this special festival for sweethearts coincided with St. Valentine's Day, a day that honors several Christian saints named Valentine. But the tradition of honoring sweethearts has nothing to do with the saints after whom the day is named.

"Where Is the Money?"

By Henry Kellogg

MasterCard, Visa and American Express. I don't have anything against credit cards, but the CASH is the best.

Extra! Extra! Read all about it! The Student Government Association Rip-Off!!!

As the cost for a college education increases, more potential students are left by the wayside because they simply cannot afford to pay the extra nickel.

The students who manage to make ends meet and are able to learn and grow at an institution of higher learning, become very disappointed when they hear the money that they've worked so hard for is allegedly being used by our so-called student officials for personal ventures.

It's a shame, and I pity those who are unaware that we, the student body at Delaware State College, pay a $57.00 student activity fee that's allegedly being used for personal use of rental cars, payment of personal bills, and lodging of our student government leaders.

Oh yes! The word is out that our money is supposedly missing and I think there should be an emergency meeting with both the administration and the Student Government Association, explaining to the people the biggest unanswered question, "Where is the money?"

In defense of the S.G.A., I think a meeting of this type would be appropriate because it would give the S.G.A. a chance to explain.

As an upperclassman and a student leader, I see this as setting a poor example for the underclassmen and future student leaders of this institution. If the S.G.A. is perceived to be the student body's friend, then who is the enemy?

People's Views

What does Valentine's Day mean to you?

Lance Toomer and Tracy Hazard, Philadelphia
Valentine's Day means the sharing of love between two people who really care for each other. Love that is shared in many different ways, if you know what I mean.

XOXOXO

John Barber III, Philadelphia, Pa., Dora Harris, Berlin, MD
To us, Valentine's is a more than special day. It's a time when friends, lovers, and families get to show their love openly without restrictions. It's a day of emotional high and togetherness.

Paul Brown and Donna Bordley, Maryland and Delaware.
To us, Valentine's Day means Love, Peace, and Happiness.

David Greaves and Erna Jones, New York
Valentine's Day to us means Love, Happiness and a candle light dinner.

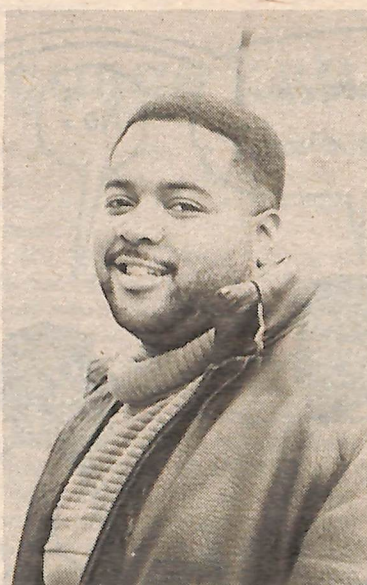

Ira Marche Williams, New York, Germaine Hill, Gary, IN
Valentines Day is a day when couples can break away from their day-to-day routine. They can come together and show their love.

Name one thing...Students can do to improve D.S.C.

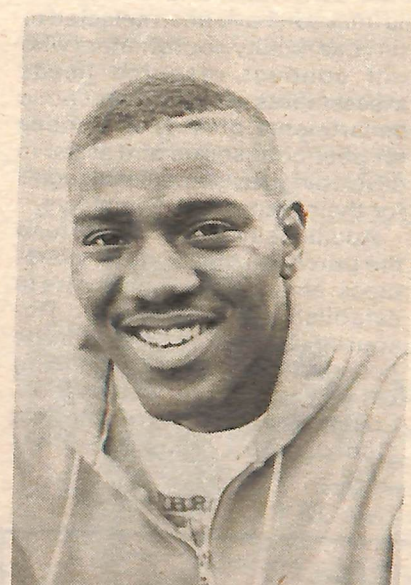

Dwana B. Street, Senior, Wilmington, DE, Business Administration
Delaware State College should become more culturally involved with the activities such as: Jazz, Ballet and African Culture (dances) that give background and meaning to Black Culture.

Tony Danzey, Senior, Newark, N.J., Sociology
Students should be more unified. There is a problem with school spirit which should be addressed. Unity makes strength and the stronger we are the better off the college will be.

Raymond Knott, Junior, Marketing, New London, CT
I feel students should become more united and start working with one another to change things about this campus that they don't like instead of just complaining. After all, it is our campus and it's up to us to make changes.

Derrick Hendrix, Senior, Baltimore, Physical Education
DelState students should interact with the community more. By doing so, we as students can display our talents.

Desiree B. Gray, Senior, Elizabeth, New Jersey, Elementary Education
A suggestion would be to enlarge the seating capacity at Alumni Stadium.

"Martin Luther King"

By Mr. Dwight Allen

Martin Luther King put his life on the line, he was born in 1929. Dr. King had the attitude to win, he loved everybody regardless of their skin. He believed in having peace and being free, Mr. King is the one that inspired me. Martin Luther King Jr. was adored by old, and youth, he also told the truth.

It seemed like he was appointed by the Lord, like a soldier with a sword.

King had a dream, his heart was rapid as water in a flowing stream.

Mr. King had determination, and esteem, I also have a dream.

"The Dreamer"

Martin Luther King was a great man.

Who spoke and traveled all over the land.

He preached in the North and in the South,

With his only weapon being his mouth.

King wanted all people to see the lights,

That everyone should have equal rights.

He did not care who stood by his side.

He held his head up high with pride.

Black, white, green, or yellow, Every man was his fellow.

Free at last were the words he used,

For the blacks who had been abused.

King was shot before his efforts came through.

He sacrificed his life for me and you.

"The Road to Success"

By Mr. Dwight Allen

I saw a line on the road, during the journey carrying a load.

I just had to find the road to success, even though it didn't have an address.

Perhaps, finding this road, I would gain, regardless of the agony and pain.

At one point of the road I was confused, there wasn't that much time used!

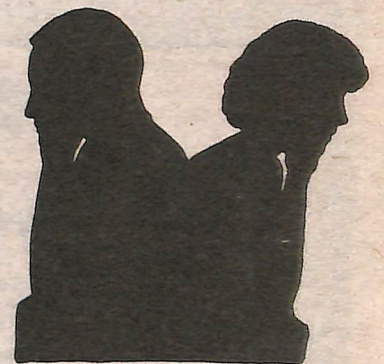

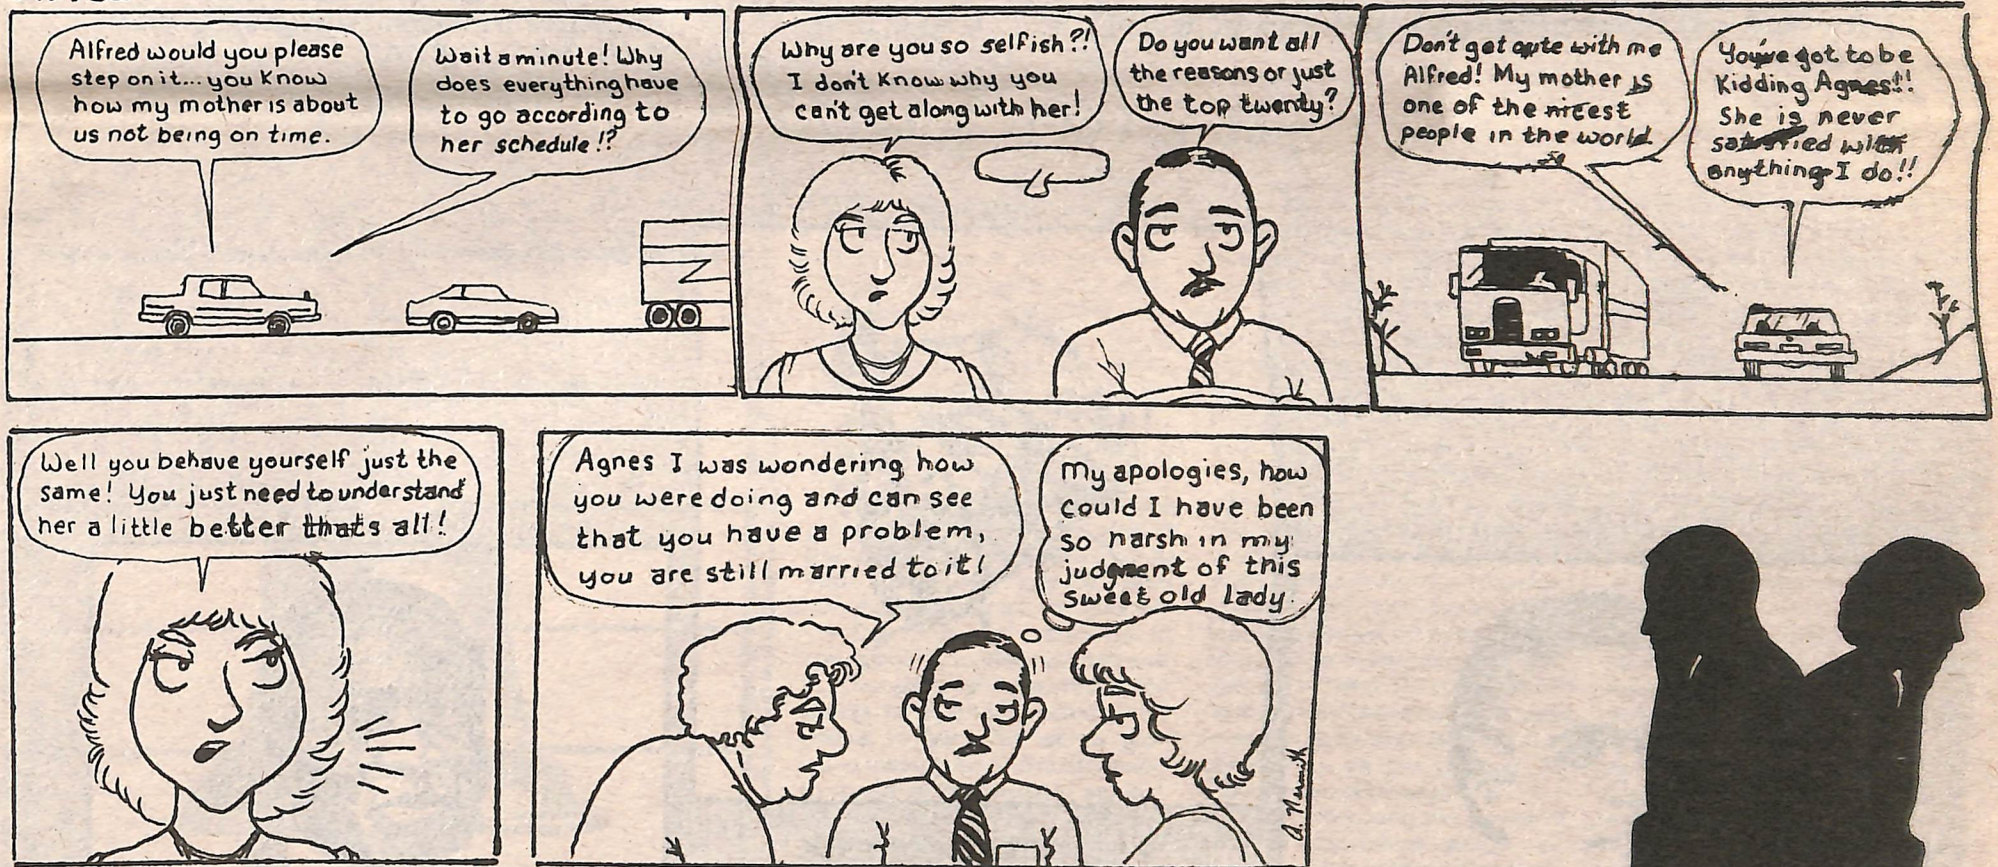

This road didn't have a map, obviously I had to use my thinking cap.

The road did not leave a trace or trail, it was like leaving a blind person without braille.

As I continued on this journey, I knew one day that I wanted to become an ATTORNEY.

So, if you ever travel on this road one day, steer yourself in the right direction and pray.

strength for the task by showing that a person, a family, an organization or a community is not alone in the pursuit of justice, peace and freedom. By demonstrating and sharing with each other our good works and deeds, we can be reminded of our common humanity.

The Freedom Trail will begin in Atlanta, Georgia at The King Center, and wind its way through states and cities, large and small, and into the churches and synagogues, organizations and institutions, schools and colleges, reaching into the very fabric of our society — the classroom and the family.

The Freedom Trail is for all those who are willing to make a commitment for the holiday, and we hope, for the year and years to come.

To demonstrate the commitment and to be part of the Freedom Trail, please carry-out at least one activity for the three major categories which have been established for observing the holiday.

Plan for the holiday:

TO REMEMBER
TO CELEBRATE, and

TO ACT

Individuals and groups are encouraged to plan an activity in each of the categories, thereby experiencing the fullness of the holiday:

- Learning about and remembering Dr. King and the civil rights struggle,
- Rejoicing and celebrating the holiday, and
- Serving through some action those who are in need, and the causes of justice, freedom, and peace.

We invite you to help build an American Tradition.

NATIONAL THEME

Our nation holds freedom as our greatest treasure, and Martin Luther King, Jr. dedicated his life to helping freedom exist for all people, of different colors, religions, and nationalities. Join with us in promoting the national theme of the holiday, "Living the Dream: Let Freedom Ring!" For those of us that know freedom, the holiday gives us an opportunity to be thankful and to rededicate ourselves to helping the countless millions who do not yet share in that freedom.

Plan Special Observances for February

Observances should be held TO REMEMBER the work of Martin Luther King, Jr. and the non-violent struggle which he led. This can be an opportunity to teach the young and renew in those who remember the philosophy of nonviolent actions for creating positive social change.

• Plan an observance TO REMEMBER an event of historical significance in which Dr. King played an integral part. Teach the purpose of his journey to your community and to other communities across the nation.

• Dr. King was called on to speak before audiences here and in other parts of the world on the issues of equality, justice and peace. Hearing his words provided inspiration and sustenance to those in the struggle against racism, poverty and war. To demonstrate the universality of his message, observances may be held that highlight some of his most famous statements and speeches:

I Have a Dream
Nobel Peace Prize Acceptance
The Drum Major Instinct
I've Been To The Mountaintop
Letter From The Birmingham Jail

• This would be an opportunity for people to share with others how seeing, hearing, or marching with Dr. King personally affected their own lives.

• Dr. King's use of nonviolent strategies to address the injustices existing in our nation inspired countless others to initiate creative nonviolent action against unjust laws and treatment. Sit-ins, Boycotts, and Freedom Rides were just some of the nonviolent methods used by citizens, black and white, to force an end to segregated eating facilities and denial of service to minorities. Wade-ins were used to desegregate beaches and swimming pools, Read-ins for libraries, Pray-ins and Kneel-ins were used for those houses of worship which segregated their congregations. Plan an activity TO REMEMBER how nonviolent action was used in our nation and in your own community as the genesis for positive social change.

Teach the young the power of creative nonviolent action. Libraries could conduct Read-ins, churches and synagogues could hold Pray-ins, Wade-ins could be held at community swimming pools, and Freedom Marches and Rides could be organized along a historic route or in a community that wished to demonstrate its commitment to the philosophy of nonviolence for social change.

• Observances in honor of Dr. King may focus on civil rights legislation that is of historical significance to a community, and on the passage of the Federal

Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

• Poetry and songs played an important part in the civil rights struggle. Hold songfests that focus on teaching the young songs of the civil rights movement and the relevance of the songs to that time period. Give special attention to teaching the anthem of the civil rights movement, "We Shall Overcome." (When singing, experience a feeling of unity by holding hands in the traditional crossed-arms manner.)

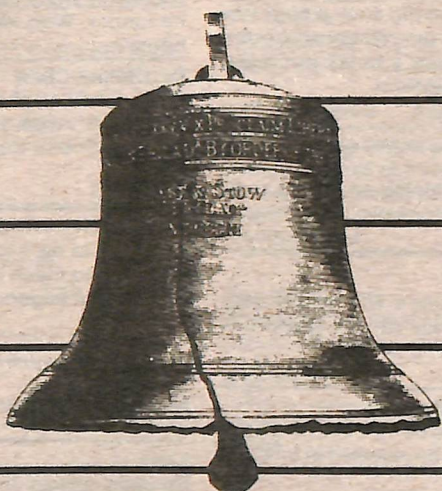

• Plan an observance TO REMEMBER those who gave their lives in the struggle for civil rights. Some of those who could be remembered include:

James E. Chaney, Michael H. Schwerner, and Andrew Goodman, Viola Liuzzo, William L. Moore, Medgar Evers, Reverend James Reeb, Jimmy Lee Jackson

• Black History Month offers us the opportunity to honor those persons, living or deceased, who led or served in the nonviolent struggle for civil rights in your community.

• Support for Dr. King and the civil rights movement came forth at different times from different sources. This month offers groups which joined the struggle an opportunity TO REMEMBER their contribution and to renew their commitment.

Jenkin's Hall Dorm Council Makes Plans

By DeVaughn Williams

The 1987-88 Dorm Council of Meta V. Jenkins, better known as "Jenkins Hall," has scheduled several activities to make this year the best for its dormitory.

Tracee Dodd, treasurer, said that residents of Jenkins Hall will continue to have fundraisers, such as hot dogs sales, a Valentine's Day raffle, a dorm council party, and a "Jenkins Horror Night," when an all-night horror movies will be featured with refreshments on sale.

The money raised will be used to purchase priority items listed by residents, such as card tables and a microwave. A part of the funds will also go toward the annual spring picnic which will be held in April.

The Jenkins Dorm Council has also instituted "disciplinary action" to let residents know that loud noise, running in the hallways, and visitation violations will not be tolerated.

The Dorm Council is sponsored by Ms. Norma Lewis, who is also resident manager of Jenkins Hall. Approximately 350 young ladies reside in Jenkins Hall.

Officers of the Dorm Council are Marshall Vicks, President; Dora Harris, Vice President; Tracee Dodd, Treasurer; Gloria Thomas, Secretary; and Tamara Tyrell, Program Chairperson. This academic year's Miss Jenkins Hall is Kaylyn Kendall.

Evelyn Castille and Carol Barkdale are Assistant Resident Managers.

Students Say Jason Library Lacks Adequate Research Facilities

By Yvonne Figueroa

Most DelState students complained that the William C. Jason Library seemed inadequate in serving their research needs. They point to the lack of materials, such as periodicals and microfilms, the misplacement of items, the need to update books on various subjects, abstracts and the PAC (computer) system as major problems.

Questions asked by these students included "How can a five-story learning center, full of materials, be so inadequate?"

Shirley Wilson, a psychology major, said that "periodicals in particular are lacking." To this, Juanita R. Williams, head librarian, pointed out that much of the missing periodicals and other materials are the result of "vandalism."

Continuing, Mrs. Williams said, "In lieu of photocopying needed pages, some students simply rip out the pages they need." Other students, she added, take and/or destroy microfilms.

Speaking about the vandalism, Brenda Brown, computer technician and supervisor of Student Workers, said, "It really bothers me because I feel that at this stage, students should have more respect for the library."

Mrs. Brown, also addressing the problem of missing materials, noted that people doing research put books back in the wrong places. She also said that another reason for missing books is that they may not have been shelved. Student workers, hired for this purpose, have been quitting, she disclosed. "They don't want a job shelving books, and the library staff is spread too thin to do that job as well," she claimed.

Eugene Butler and Will Hurst, both seniors, said that the library lacks up-to-date materials. Butler added that the PAC system rarely lists the books he needs. Hurst, using the psychological abstracts as an example, said, "I don't think they've been updated since 1985."

Addressing the matter of outdated materials, Mrs. Williams pointed out that selection of new books is done through the departments. That is, in order for materials directly related to a department subject area or areas to be updated, the chairman of the department must place orders for them.

Mrs. Williams added that another reason is that the cost of items such as periodicals are going up every year and that the library functions on a limited budget.

About updating the program of the PAC (Public Access Computerized) system, Barbara F. Quissaunee, library technician (head of cataloging), said that for three hours in the morning, she works on inputting new literature in the system, which hardly allows time for dealing with "older ones."

She continued, "We place things in the system by priority." Meaning that for the rest of her working day, the system is not a priority since she also has to man the circulation desk. Apparently, many of the library staff carry on a number of functions, which means some areas get neglected. "We all do double-duty," Mrs. Quissaunee noted.

Dr. Daniel E. Coons, director of College Libraries, admitted that the PAC system is quickly becoming "obsolete," but disclosed that a new computerized system is expected to be available for use by students this semester. Dr. Coons said it will be an "Electronic Encyclopedia," which will function with a keyboard and a disk unlike the present system.

About the library moving into the computer age, Dr. Coons said his plan is to have all DSC students possess increased research knowledge by being "computer literate."

Education Honor Society Donates VCR to DSC's Early Childhood Lab/School

By Victoire Pratt

A video cassette recorder (VCR) was donated to the Early Childhood Laboratory School at DelState by the Education Honor Society, Kappa Delta Pi.

"The VCR will be used by the other members of the Education Department too," said Gloria M. Gardner, director of the Laboratory School, where the machine will be kept. Education instructors and administrators who need it will be free to use the VCR, she said.

The pre-school will use the VCR to show the children movies for entertainment, and to teach them how to act at the movies, Gardner said. She added that the children would be taught the proper way to sit, and how to talk softly.

"Sometimes, they will be served popcorn," she said, "to provide a theater-like atmosphere." The VCR will also be used to show the children educational programs, she said.

Gardner, who is also the advisor for the Education Honor Society, said she has been with the pre-school for the past three years. Members of the Society are nominated by department chairpersons and Olivia Washington, chairperson and director of the Honors Program, Gardner said. She also noted that Diane DiMaggio is the Society's co-advisor.

"Students with a 3.0 grade point average and 50 credit hours, who show interest in teaching and leadership are eligible for nomination," Gardner disclosed.

After the students are selected, they have a four to six week pledge period, she added. "They have to do a group project, have a fundraiser and pay the adjoining fees during this time," she said. An example of a group project, she noted, for new inductees was a workshop on sexual abuse that they conducted one year.

Each year, Kappa Delta Pi makes a contribution to one of the organizations on campus with proceeds from their annual fundraiser, she said.

Presently, there are 15 members of the Education Honor Society on the DelState campus. All types of education majors, such as Business Education, English Education, and Music Education, may become members of this international organization, Gardner said.

SPORTS

Letter to Sports Editor:

Dear Editor

Delaware State is a college that prides itself on consistency, but our zealous attempt at consistency has gone from hope, to reality, to despair and finally shame.

When the season began Del-state could only hope to improve on its pitiful imitation of college basketball, it put on a season ago. A season that would have Naismith turning in his grave. The first game of the season ushered in the Reality that the talent was -- still is -- present; but the heart-felt, last second, buzzer beater foreshadowed the despair that would make this a long, long, long season.

Now we face the shame of a season that shall make a mockery of our HORNET SPIRIT. A season that shall test whether any institution can endure another year of national ridicule and habitual losing. A season that shall test the old adage "Rocking the boat may sink us all," but haven't we sank low enough? Haven't we suffered enough?

They say it's always darker before the dawn, but in our case the dawn never comes. We are the interlopers locked in a perpetual Twilight Zone in which all that is -- isn't; all that was -- has never been; all that could be -- will never be; Therefore everything is.

If this sounds critical and harsh then excuse me; but I am tired of losing. I am tired of being the laughing stock of the nation, tired of the bottom bowl.

If a person lives, he is good to have learned. I am sure everyone has learned that coach -- excuse me -- Mr. Emery is losing. His record at Delstate is 2 and the world, and the world is beating the h--- out of him. Watch out Al Dulaney because He-e-e-e-re's Emery.

Consistency has its limit. How long must we wait for Mr. Emery to start coaching? This year I hoped to see the end of this poor man who is being forced to do something 99.9999% of the world knows how to do -- win a game!!!! ANY GAME!!! Please.

Aggies Humble Hornets

By Eugene Butler

The Aggies of North Carolina A&T crushed host Delaware State 94-61, treating the hometown fans with some sharp shooting and a number of acrobatic slam dunks.

The Aggies shot 70% from the field, and posted five players in double figures, with one other player falling short by one point.

North Carolina A&T, always a perennial powerhouse in the MEAC, jumped out to a 10-0 lead before DelState's Paul Newman hit a pair of free throws with 17:10 remaining in the first-half to put the Hornets on the board.

The Aggies put on a three-point shot clinic as they shot 58% from the floor, led by Junior guard Corvin Davis, who finished 3-for-3 in that department.

Davis and teammate Chuckie Becton paced the Aggies with 17 points a piece, followed by Claude Williams who added 16 points and pulled down 12 rebounds.

DelState faced a 26-point deficit at one time in the first-half and found themselves down by 23 points at the intermission.

DelState's Newman had a game-high of 21 points and snagged 10 rebounds as he led the struggling Hornets, who shot 32% from the field.

"The game was exciting, but it could have been closer," said one Hornet fan.

With the victory, North Carolina A&T improved its record to 13-2 overall, and 7-0 in the conference. The Hornets fell to 2-17, and 1-8 respectively.

The Aggies are currently ranked number 2 in the country in the Sheridan Black College Poll.

Bulldogs Devour Hornets

By Henry A. Kellogg

Once again the men's basketball team faced defeat but, they played one of their better games against the Bulldogs of South Carolina State.

The Hornets scored, first with an inside move from Paul Newman but, the Bulldogs responded with a quick lay-up. Until the 15:00 mark of the first half both teams exchanged consecutive baskets until a S.C. State fast break and foul gave them an 11-8 advantage. The Bulldogs kept a 3 point advantage until the 10:00 mark when James Clarke scored a 3 point play to make the score 18-17. Four turnovers later and the Hornets trailed 28-18. From this point of the Contest until the end of half both teams exchanged baskets to end the half with the Hornets trailing 41-28.

The Bulldogs started the scoring for the second-half but, continuous spurts by the Hornets enabled the Hornets to tie the game up at the Midway point 53-53. But, 3 turnovers helped the Bulldogs pull away to a 64-57 lead and from this point the Bulldogs finished the Hornets off.

DelState had a more favorable outing but, turnovers put the sting to the Hornets once again.

The Final Score was S.C. State 75...Delaware State 64.

Ian Bell: A Profile in Sports

Name: Ian E. Bell

Born: September 8, 1966

Place: Wilmington, Delaware

Age: 21

Sign: Virgo

Height: 5'10"

Hobbies: Raising fish, watching videos, jogging, weightlifting

Q: When did you first become interested in sports?

A: When I was in junior high school I played baseball for a little league team called the Trojans. At first my father didn't want me to play because all the other kids were bigger than me. My mother convinced him to let me play because she felt it would keep me out of trouble.

Q: When did you first start wrestling?

A: I started wrestling in my junior year at Concord High School when I was about 16. Darryl Robinson and I went to the same school. One day when I was coming from detention Darryl asked me to try it out. I did, and it was instant love. The coach said that it was unusual for a person to start wrestling at such a late age. Most kids start to wrestle when they are about 6 or 7. I was pretty good, but Darryl was awesome!

The team overall was not very good though.

Q: How would you contrast college with high school wrestling?

A: It's like the difference between college and the pros. The training is harder. We start about 3:30 p.m. with a five mile run. Then we jump rope for about three minutes, wrestle for three or four matches (about 7 minutes apiece). All this is non-stop. Then we do cal's. and climb rope. We finish off with a two mile run at about 6:00, or when ever the coach says we're through.

Q: Is there a special diet that you like to stick to while you're in training?

A: I like to stay away from fatty foods, no liquor, and I eat a lot of natural foods like fish, fruits and vegetables. I stay away from heavy meats.

Q: What about when you're not in training?

A: I still try to keep in condition but I do eat some pizza, and a few burgers. I really like to eat soft ice cream too.

Q: What person is most responsible for your success?

A: I would have to say my mother. She's my backbone, she got me started.

Q: How has wrestling effected your life from an emotional perspective?

A: It allowed me to begin to believe in myself. It taught me dedication, and that if you work hard you can achieve anything. You don't get anything in life by not working for it, sweating for it, and sometimes bleeding for it.

Q: Do you try to rub this philosophy off on other people?

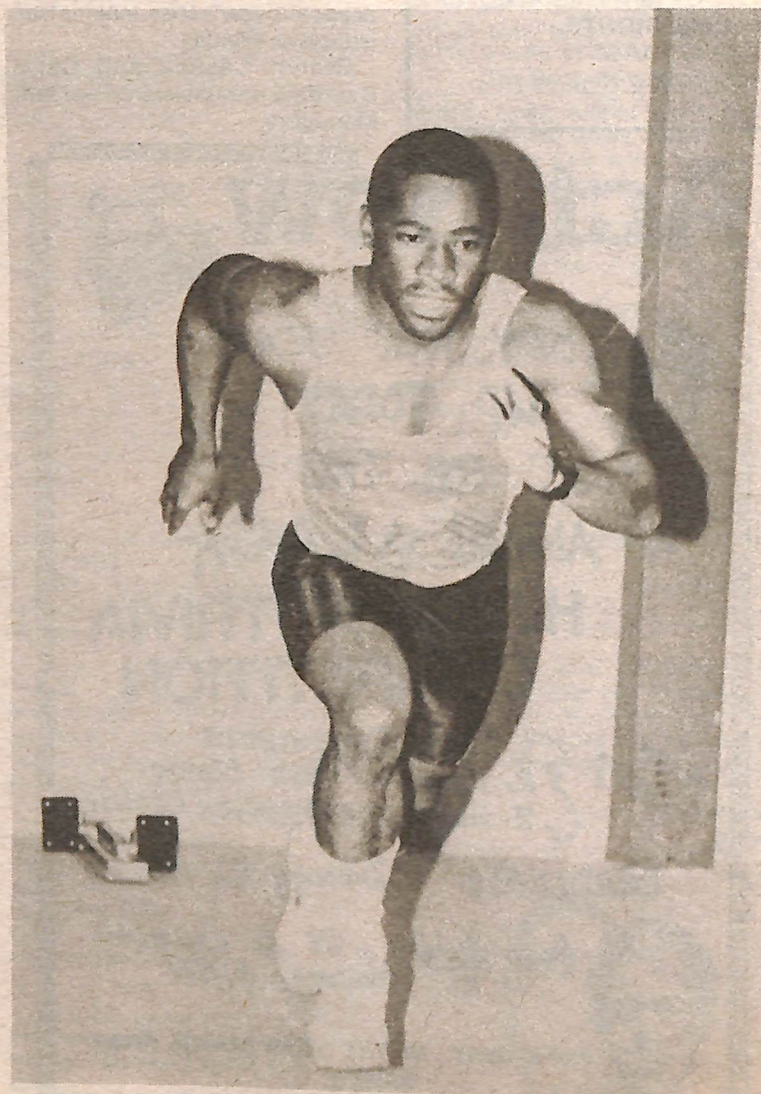

A: Yes, especially the younger people. They can achieve the same things that I have if they apply themselves. My message to them is Believe in yourself!

Q: What are your plans for the next five years?

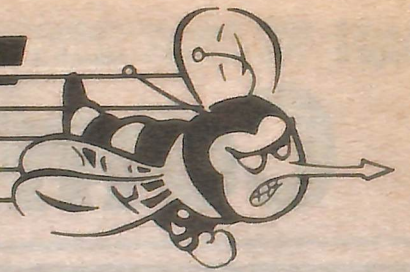

A: I plan to work in a management or marketing firm. Hopefully in California.

Q: What about ten years from now?

A: I plan to own my own corporation or firm.

Russian Children's Photo Exhibit Displayed at Delaware State College

(DSC Public Relations)

The Russian Children's Photo Exhibit was displayed in the Commuter Lounge, King Student Center, Delaware State College, February 15 and 16.

This exhibit was under the auspices of the Kent County Peace Fellowship and the Art Department of Delaware State College.

Forty-five of the 90 photographs (with posters, catalog, and postcards available for sale) were shown 8:30 a.m.-10 p.m. The balance of the exhibit was shown at display sites at Caesar Rodney

High School and Dover High School.

Three faculty members, Dr. Kathleen Berhalter, Professor and Chairperson, Art and Art Education Department; Dr. Sathi Dasgupta, Assistant Professor, Sociology Department; Dr. Margaret McKay, Assistant Professor, History and Political Science Department, and graduate student Nancy Gardner, Delaware State College, toured the USSR for two weeks under the auspices of Salisbury State College in August 1987.

Commuters Do Not Want to be Forgotten

By Eugene Butler, Jr.

In a school where the enrollment is only 2,300, one would assume that a feeling of family and cohesiveness would prevail. One group of students on the Delaware State campus, however, feels they are "step children" — the commuters.

Commuters come in all shapes, colors and sizes so there is no clear-cut premise for their semi-alienation.

According to Kristin Smith, a junior commuter at Delaware State, the reason that she doesn't participate in school activities, or come to the games is because of the lack of information mailed to her. "We don't know when things are going on. You really feel different as a commuter, especially when you've lived on campus before and now you do not," noted Smith.

Lack of communication appears to be the biggest issue of concern to commuters. "I feel there is a lack of communication between, and a lack of information flowing from, the administration to the commuters," said freshman Ronald Sudler.

Delaware State does mail out listings of registration dates, deadlines for fees, dates and times of Parents' Day festivities and other campus events, but every campus event is not listed. Too often, the commuter finds out about an event after the fact.

Another issue of concern to the commuter is the unpredictability of the "Delaware weather." The commuter, despite weather conditions, is accountable for the same responsibilities as the student who resides on campus.

"I think the school should be more lenient on the commuters during bad weather," expressed Sudler.

The consensus among the commuters interviewed is that they do not want any special favors, but they would like to be kept abreast of campus happenings and "to be treated like a big brother and/or sister colleague."

DelState Student CASE Scholarship Winner

By Victoire Pratt

Delaware State College sent Victoire Pratt, student alumni association president, to Boston from Jan. 30 to Feb. 3, to attend the annual CASE conference.

CASE, the Council for the Advancement and Support to Education, held its largest conference ever during that time with over 2,000 participants from Districts I and II.

Students from many colleges competed for scholarships to cover the conference costs. Pratt, a junior majoring in Journalism/English Education, was among the 12 scholarship winners. She was nominated as a likely candidate by Bobby C. Jones, director of Alumni Affairs at DelState. It was the first time a DelState student representative attended.

Roland R. Ridgeway, Director of Development here at DSC served as the Student Scholarship Selection Committee Chairman, and also attended the CASE conference.

The CASE conference was designed to promote networking, build professional relationships and to give a wide variety of presentations, according to Sally McLellan, vice president for Institutional Advancement at New England College of Optometry, and Sally V. Souris, vice president for Institutional Advancement at Towson State.

Mostly, the conference consisted of information workshops, with notable speakers such as Margaret Hennig, co-author of The Managerial Woman; David Hartman, former host of the television program Good Morning America; and Shirley Chisholm, the first Black woman to be elected to the Congress of the U.S.

Victoire Pratt

Workshop topics included "Managing Volunteers Effectively," "The Shotgun Marriage That Just Might Work: Public Relations and Development," "Training for Television," and a great deal more.

"I got to talk to Ms. Chisholm and Mr. Hartman. I got to meet many people from a great many colleges here on the East coast. Many of them informed me that if I ever need anything to simply call the numbers listed on their business cards and they would be glad to oblige. I am very grateful that I was selected to attend," Pratt, the DSC Case Scholarship winner, said.

DSC Alumni Phonathon

(DSC Public Relations)

The Third Annual Phonathon was conducted from the Office of Alumni Affairs, Delaware State College, Feb. 8-19. Many Delaware State College alumni throughout the state received solicitation calls from alumni volunteers and student callers between 6 p.m. and 8:30 p.m., Monday-Thursday.

The goal for this year's Phonathon was to increase alumni pledges by ten percent. Alumni were encouraged to invest in the future of Delaware State College by making a liberal contribution. Anyone in need of additional information about the Phonathon may call the Office of Alumni Affairs, 736-5178, 8:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m., Monday-Friday.

"Putting Women in Their Place...Beside Their Men" Drama Staged on Campus

(DSC Public Relations)

A dramatic production by George Folkes, Putting Women in Their Place...Beside Their Men, was presented on Feb. 23, in the Education-Humanities Theatre, Delaware State College, at 8 p.m.

"Putting Women does take risks. It is a one-man show relying on the talents of a basically unknown performer to keep an audience entertained for about 90 minutes. The volatile subject matter of the show -- female/male relationships -- also heightens the potential for disaster. The show's material is very timely and timeless and when you see Folkes perform, be prepared to get involved," according to The Wave Newspaper.

Putting Women in Their Place...Beside Their Men is directed by Vernon Bennett, starring George Folkes of Folkes Productions.

Folkes began his performing career at the age of seven, performing with his own group on the streets of the South Bronx. After furthering his education at prep school in Boston and receiving a B.A. degree in Mass Communications from Morehouse College in Atlanta, Folkes became an "artist in residence" for the Georgia Council for the Arts and Humanities.

Folkes was awarded three United States Department of Labor contracts totaling $105,000, which he used to inspire young filmmakers in Atlanta. His student-produced productions, most notably a feature of the Jacksons, enriched the lives of many young people around the State of Georgia.

After many years of motivating people through humorous, inspirational speeches, Folkes was persuaded to return to the stage. In March 1986, Folkes began work on his one-man show, Putting Women in Their Place...Beside Their Men. With help from director Vernon Bennett, Mr. Folkes recounted the experiences that shaped his views on male-female relationships.

Cheerleading at DelState in a Slump

By Erna Jones

For the past two basketball seasons, Delaware State College's cheerleaders haven't participated fully during the games. According to two of the former captains, the reasons are lack of funds, experienced supervision, and enthusiasm.

Desiree Gray, former captain of the cheerleading squad, said, "The cheerleading budget isn't enough. It doesn't allow us to travel everywhere with the team or to purchase the proper uniforms." She referred to the Howard University football game last semester as an example of insufficient uniforming. For example, cheerleaders cheered in freezing temperatures in mini-skirt uniforms instead of sweatsuits, she noted.

Dwana Street, also former captain of the cheerleading squad, said, "Cheerleading, like other sports, involves the attention which is needed to maintain a good performance. As far as football is concerned, cheerleaders are the 12th man on the field and in basketball, we're the sixth man on the court. People fail to realize that cheerleading is a serious athletic activity. Trained and experienced advisors are needed."

The last reason for the non-participative attitude is the lack of enthusiasm on the cheerleaders' part. According to a former cheerleader, the squad is not excited about cheering because the basketball team isn't in its best season.

Other complaints heard included the lack of a scholarship fund, study hall, and respect.

Campus Pros & Cons

By Jean E. Wilson
Layout Editor and Reporter

In the last issue of the Hornet, I promised you an article. This is the first article of four to appear in the Hornet newspaper.

"Does B.D. mean Big Deal or Business Department?" The question brings to mind the problems about the Business Administration Department which two years ago underwent a shakeup.

The shakeup happened after an article about the Business Administration Department and its former chairperson appeared in the Hornet newspaper. It exposed a troubling problem that some instructors, including the former chairperson, did not have the proper qualifications or credentials to hold certain positions in the department. After the article appeared, the problem came to the attention of the Board of Trustees and the former president of DelState. The former chairperson was released of that duty, but only as chairperson.

Today, the question that remains is, "Are the problems that resulted in that dismissal now solved?" The answer for many is "no." Most business students, as well as their parents, feel that more investigations should be done on some of the instructors in the Business Department. Some unresolved questions that continue to linger include:

- What credentials do most of the instructors have?
- What quality of education, degrees and leadership ability do some of the instructors have?

- Concerning the degrees they have, how did they earn them?

- Why does one particular instructor choose to use NO textbook for most of his classes, when the use of a textbook would be most acceptable and conceivable for business education in 1988 and the future?

- Why do students have to suffer when instructors feel they are here to work for a few hours, not to be bothered with questions after class and sometimes during the class period, because their main concern is to do what they need to do to get their paychecks and go home?

DelState needs to prepare its students to be future employers, not just employees. DelState might be the only place that most of these students, especially those on fixed incomes, handicapped, or Black, can afford to obtain their undergraduate studies. I believe that DelState should have one of the most advanced and marketable Business Departments, as well as college, on the East coast. About one-third of the student enrollment on campus today, are enrolled in the Business Department.

Seeing it as an equation: Quality Education + Students + Quality Instructors + Dedication = Delaware State College + a Business Department that is a Big Deal.

What this writer has learned from talking to people on and off campus is that a total reorganization is needed in the Business Department.

Meanwhile, DelState President Dr. William B. DeLauder has said that his first priority is the reorganization of academic programs. The academic reorganization would split the job of the Office of Vice President and Dean of Academic Affairs into two areas, allowing the Dean to oversee the nineteen academic departments and the Vice President to be directly in charge of supervising the administrative offices and staff.

Dr. DeLauder said he would like to establish four schools, each with its own dean. The schools would be Arts and Sciences, Business and Economics, Education, and Professional Studies. The nineteen departments would fall into one of the four schools. This reorganization would take place within the next four years, he said.

At the time of my interview with Dr. DeLauder, he stated that he has a task force looking into every department and area on this college campus. This was a welcome statement from him, which this writer will try to follow in this column.

This column will serialize a four-part article on the issues raised on this campus. In the next issue, it will be entitled "Are the Students at D.S.C. Special?"

Students, parents or concerned instructors who wish to address some of the issues raised in this article, can write their views to the Hornet newspaper or directly contact Dr. Henry Tisdale, Vice President and Dean of Academic Affairs at 736-4904 or 736-4905. For this column, the Hornet hopes to interview Dr. Tisdale about these issues for the next edition of the newspaper.

Breasure Reappointed

(DSC Public Relations)

Joyce M. Breasure, Departmental Assistant, English Department, Delaware State College, was notified on Feb. 8 that she is re-appointed to the Board of Certified Counselors.

This is the first time that an incumbent member of the Board has been re-elected. Ms. Breasure will serve another three-year term on the Board which has certified over 14,000 counselors throughout the World.

Founder's Day Program Held at DelState

by Victoire Pratt

"Importunity" was the subject addressed at the 97th Founder's Day Program by key speaker Honorable William Freeman, state representative, North Carolina General Assembly on Sunday, Feb. 7.

Although, in some quarters thought of as troublesome, to be importune, persistent and determined is important, Freeman said.

"The founder started this institution in what was a feedbarn," he told a small Delaware State College audience, but Dr. Mishoe and our previous presidents kept pushing for improvements, "until today we are second to none of any of the other land grant colleges," Freeman said.

The Omega Psi Phi Fraternity presented Freeman, a DSC alumnus, with a congratulatory plaque, and Mayor Carroll presented him with a coin of the city. "We don't use keys here," Carroll said.

Also at the Founder's Day program it was announced that Kent B. Amos, a 1970 graduate, was presented with the 1987 Distinguished Alumni Award, representing Delaware State College alumni. Amos is founder and president of the Triad Group, a personal management, consulting and marketing company.

Thoughts for Today

By Albert Dines

Prov. 23:7 "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he."

Gigo is a computer term, an acronym for garbage in, garbage out. Computer programmers know that whatever they feed into a computer will inevitably show up in your behavior. We become what we think about most of the time. Black or white, Chicano or Indian, male or female, as you see yourself in the heart of your thoughts -- in your mind's eye -- so you become.

What you "see" in your mind's eye is what you get: Alcoholic or Athlete -- Prostitute or Nurse -- Drug Pusher or Teacher -- Nobody or Somebody, Loser or Winner.

Prov. 23:7 "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he."

All your actions, feelings, behavior, even your abilities are always consistent with the way you think and see yourself. You will "act like" the sort of person you perceive yourself to be. The business world has long ago discovered that a person will never rise above his thinking. Your self image is formed as a result of what you feed into your computer mind.

The image you form of yourself will cause you to either succeed or fail in life.

Incidents of Violence on Campus are Increasing

By Erna Jones

Increasing violence on Delaware State College's campus is a growing problem and students and faculty are concerned. During the week of Jan. 23-30, four incidents were reported.

The first incident occurred Jan. 23 at approximately 2:30 a.m. in the parking lot of the Martin Luther King Student Center. A fight broke out and one man was beaten and several bystanders injured.

Wyder Towers was the scene of another incident in which a man was seen trying to force entry into several rooms after visiting hours. It is alleged that he also attempted to harass some residents.

On Jan. 30, an alleged rape occurred on campus between the hours of 2 and 4 a.m. Later that same day, another fight was reported between a student and a visitor.

Students at the college are becoming more concerned about their safety. Many blame campus security, while others blame the violence on the increasing percentage of student intoxication.

Commentary/Opinion

Letter to the Editor:

Dear Editor

To the students and chief interest of Delaware State College.

In the word of Malcolm X, "We need a revolution." How does it feel to pay dearly for an education and be dictated to in outrageous authoritative fashion. This is our institution, and if there should be any dictating then we freshmen, we sophomores, we juniors, and we seniors should do it.

What am I talking about? O.K., Grievance One: It should be a basic right of a student to choose whether or not he or she wants to subject himself to the "soup kitchen" of ARA services. However, if we must, then we by all means demand that courtesy be reciprocated and a formidable position be served and maybe we won't wet our tastebuds for the tantalizing leftovers which await us the next day. In addition when I registered a complaint to Harry Johnson, supervisor of the night crew, and former student he zealously responded that "I will stand by my people however they act, if you have a problem with it, then go see Dean Lightfoot." Well, granted that's what Dean Lightfoot is here for, but if he was in the practice of solving problems as they come, then I guess he'd be out of a job then wouldn't he?

More? Why certainly. Grievance Two: Never have I seen a more pathetic misappropriation of responsibility than when all of the locks were changed in Evers Hall over Christmas break. How would you like to put your key in (and I hope you're not in a hurry) and pull your entire lock out? Well if you're curious just walk up to any Evers resident, and maybe he'll tell you about how he went to his room only to discover his lock to his door absent. Maybe he'll tell you about how he fell to his knees to thank whatever God he may worship that his VCR, television and stereo miraculously remain. Maybe he'll tell you about how Dean Daniels came to his aid with a replacement lock and told him he couldn't have it until he came up with the one that was missing in the first place." To the Residence Life Department, my applause.

Let us also not forget the "Fifty-five dollar motel" known as Wynder towers. For fifty-five dollars extra you are entitled to free carpet, cable television, a kitchen, a lounge area, a balcony, and a very short trip to the bathroom. All this for fifty-five dollars. To all you males concerned, I must point out that the sex change will be significantly extra. Charles Prima suggested that male seniors be allowed to pay for the luxury of single rooms in Evers, but as shown in the past, the Residence Life Dept. in their infamous wisdom and brilliant ideas must have a good reason for declining this well researched suggestion. Once again, to the Residence Life Department, my applause.

Are you psyched yet? Then you must be ready for Grievance Three: As this (our beloved Del State) is a historically black college, Administration should be aware that one of our main sources of recreation is manifested (especially in the colder months) in the sport of basketball. Where are the facilities?! No money?! Sure there is! We just built a wall didn't we? Sure there is.

Speaking of this "Great Wall of D.S.C." what is that for, and whose brain child is that?! Is it to keep us in or keep people out? Don't tell me it's for beautification, because we should all be aware that beautification starts within. By the way, that was Grievance Four.

Next on the firing line is Grievance five, the mail room. I challenge anyone to make the claim that the mail stops running in their town on Saturdays. SURPRISE, it does at D.S.C., but be patient boys and girls your money will be waiting for you on Monday.

Well I am exhausted. Students, stand up, be counted, and be aware that there are systems that exist and persist on YOUR campus and in YOUR institution that need severe overturning. "Revolutions change systems."

In the mean time, "We wear the mase." (Paul Lawrence Dunbar).

Kellogg's Korner

By Henry Kellogg

Throughout the 60's and even before, we, as Black people cried and struggled for the integration of the races. Blacks wanted, then and now, to be treated with respect and accepted as first class citizens. We're tired of reading, "For White Only" and "For Colored Only" signs which marked our nation as a segregated states, instead of a United States.

Today, Black and White have become more integrated to a certain degree but the Black race within its own boundaries, has become more segregated.

We, as Blacks, have allowed wealth, power, and our alliances we've gained with certain Blacks whom we perceive to be on our level financially and socially, interfere with the cohesion of the Black race as a whole.

Even though the alliances with which causes legislators not to be icles to help upgrade the race, they are pulling us apart by leading the race in so many different directions that we don't have full support in one way or another, which causes legislative not to be passed because we don't have enough support behind each bill.

We, as a people, must overcome these divisions and unite to become a stronger race.

It should not matter whether my skin color is light or dark, but what should matter is "I am Black!"

It should not matter whether I'm Baptist or Methodist, but what should matter is "I am Black!"

It should not matter whether I'm Gamme Phi or Epsilon Rho, but what should matter is "I am Black!"

And it should not matter whether I'm worth $200,000.00 and live in comfort in Beverly Hills or if I'm worth $2,000.00 and live on skid row, but what should matter is that "I am Black!!!" Now, these are a few reasons why we as Blacks segregate ourselves from one another.

The bottom line is we as a race of people must overcome these obstacles by joining hand in hand and unite as a people and keep the Black race on a progressive movement.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor

Let me make one thing clear. The assumption that blacks who are economically stable are "bourgeoisies," because they do not offer any financial support to less fortunate blacks is absurd.

The reality of the matter is that a person's financial status has nothing to do with his willingness to help someone. Moreover, the main problem with the black family today is lack of education and although money plays an important factor in higher education, money "should" not be a factor.

However, it would be very accurate to say that blacks who are educated and do not offer support to anyone, in any capacity, solely to protect their financial status, are very much "bourgeoisie."

Arrogant, inconsiderate, and selfish are more adjectives used to describe the modern day "bourgeoisie." Del-State is infiltrated with administrators, faculty members, and staff persons who manifest such characteristics.

Some people may argue that such an assumption is very dogmatic, but they need to be "Dogged" and brought out in the public's eye so people can see these individuals for who they really are.

I get sick thinking about the potential this institution has and watch how it's destroyed by such ignorant administrators and educators. I often wonder if these people saw the flick "Roots." I'm serious, this school's administration does not even appear to be empathetic, let alone sympathetic, towards the needs of the students.

I'm sorry, I forgot, if you are a part of one of the little clicks on campus, you might get a little bit of consideration. These people are here to make their eight hours, jump into their luxurious cars to get out of here, and maybe, just maybe, they might wave goodbye while passing you. Well, that's enough facetiousness.

I realize that I am one of the few students who has the courage to stand up and say something about this incompetence, but our time has come to reap what is rightfully ours. These practices "are a kind of paradoxal, incongruous, dualistic inconsistency, and intolerable."

Stand up and be counted. Stand up and be heard. Let your cry for educational growth ring aloud. So loud that when these people go home for dinner, the echo from your voice will be sounding in their ears, making the silverware and plates tremble. If this does not work, remember this:

We all have the choice of being right or being human. We are all the same, but to be aware of this fact synthesizes a strong sense of direction above reason.

Blacks will comprise 11 percent of voting age population

The number of voting age Blacks is expected to total 20.4 million in November 1988, or 11 percent of the national total, according to Census Bureau projections.

Blacks will represent 17 percent of the voting age population in the South, 10 percent in the Northeast, 9 percent in the Midwest, and 5 percent in the West. About half of voting age Blacks are expected to be living in the South, compared with 20 percent in both the Northeast and Midwest, and 10 percent in the West.

About 65 percent of the District of Columbia's voting age population will be Black, according to the projections. The largest Black proportions among states are expected to be in Mississippi (31 percent), Louisiana and South Carolina (27 percent), Georgia and Maryland (24 percent), Alabama (23 percent), and North Carolina (20 percent).

The projections are based on the resident population, including armed forces stationed in the states, and exclude all persons living overseas.

The table shows the projected Nov. 1 voting age population by race and Hispanic origin for each state.

I am a foreigner

By Joann Major

I am a foreigner in a strange land
Don't know where I'm going and on whose grounds I will stand.

I am a foreigner in a strange land.
Could someone please lend me a helping hand?

I've travelled from far across the sea,
Leaving behind a mother, father and lots of friends who love me.

Onto a plane where I flew for hours
Dreaming about birds, bees and spring flowers
Only to be awakened by a thrilling voice say Foreigners aren't WELCOME but they are here anyway.

Away from home

By Joann Major

What comes to mind when the going gets rough?
Nothing besides staying home where it is not rough
Nothing to worry about, not a care in the world;
Because Daddy will handle it, you're his girl.

Away from home it is plenty much different
You are on your own, everything left up to your opinion.
Whether it be right or whether it be wrong
It's your choice because you are all alone.

All alone in a world where no one cares
Caught up with problems like a rabbit in a snare
The only way out is to think about home
And say to yourself that you will never more roam.

National Black Arts Festival

The first National Black Arts Festival, "Celebration '88," will be held in Atlanta, Georgia, July 30 through August 7, 1988.

The nine-day festival will feature scores of concerts, plays, musicals, dance performances, films, art exhibitions, late night cabarets, and symposiums by America's most distinguished black artists.

Conceived and sponsored by the Fulton County Board of Commissioners, the Fulton County Arts Council, and with support from the City of Atlanta Bureau of Cultural Affairs, the festival is the first of its kind. It will celebrate the history, creativity and excellence of black artists and the contributions they have made to this country since the Harlem Renaissance. It will offer a national showcase for the "legends" and the "rising stars" of today's black American cultural scene.

Parks, theaters, shopping malls, arts institutions, galleries, night clubs and unusual venues throughout the city will sparkle with entertainment by notable local and national artists for the nine-day period. While some events will be ticketed, many will be free to the public.

A blue ribbon panel of renowned artists, corporate, political and community leaders is currently being assembled to support and help publicize the event. The panel membership will be announced in the fall.

"Celebration '88" is expected to draw a multi-racial audience of all ages from all over the United States. A variety of performance ticket packages, and travel and hotel packages will be offered later this year.

The Fulton County Arts Council was established in 1979 by the Fulton County Board of Commissioners to assist in supporting and promoting the arts in Fulton County. Led by Commission Chairman Michael Lomax, a 1987 planning budget of $350,000 was earmarked by the council for this event. Plans are for the festival to be presented every two years with support from major corporations.

staff is led by Michele Smith, executive director. Ms. Smith, an Atlanta native, is a graduate of Spellman College in Sociology with a masters degree from Harvard University in organizational administration. She has 17 years of executive level experience in organizational management and administration in the public, private and non-profit sectors. Ms. Smith was formerly a member of the administrative staff of Radcliffe College; a foundation executive with the Phelps-Stokes Fund in Washington, D.C.; Director of Federal Programs for the Indiana Commission for Higher Education and, most recently, an independent management and planning consultant.

"We're going to make history here," she says. "We will create a national showcase for the innovative, stellar work that has been and is being done by black Americans, African-Americans, and Caribbean-Americans throughout the U.S."

Called the "seat of the civil rights movement" and the "cradle of black education and thought," Atlanta is considered the ideal city to host this festival. "Atlanta has both the vision and the combination of resources to make this event a success," says Ms. Smith.

Stephanie Hughley is project manager for the festival. Ms. Hughley is a graduate of Antioch College in Ohio with a masters from Kent State University. She has over 12 years of arts management experience in theater, dance and music. She was a dancer with the Elma Lewis School and the George Faison Company; has mounted original productions on and off Broadway; and has toured as managing director of several international dramatic and music productions. Before joining the Festival staff, she was general manager of the Negro Ensemble Company.

Shirley Henderson, a graduate of Spelman with a masters from the University of Illinois and experienced in travel management and promotion, freelance writing, and advertising copywriting, is project assistant for the festival.

Hornet Womens Track Team Wins 5th Consecutive MEAC Title

By Joann Major

At the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference (MEAC) Championships held in Chapel Hill, N.C., Feb. 12-13, the Hornets Women's Track Team retained its title for the fifth consecutive year. Frederick Sowerby, head coach of the team, was selected the most outstanding women's coach for the fifth successive year, and Tanya McCray, a junior and Business Administration major, was named most outstanding performer.

McCray finished first in the mile (5:26:20), second in the 880 yard run (2:22:7), and third in the 2-mile race. She also anchored the 2-mile relay team that finished second, compiling a total of 26 points.

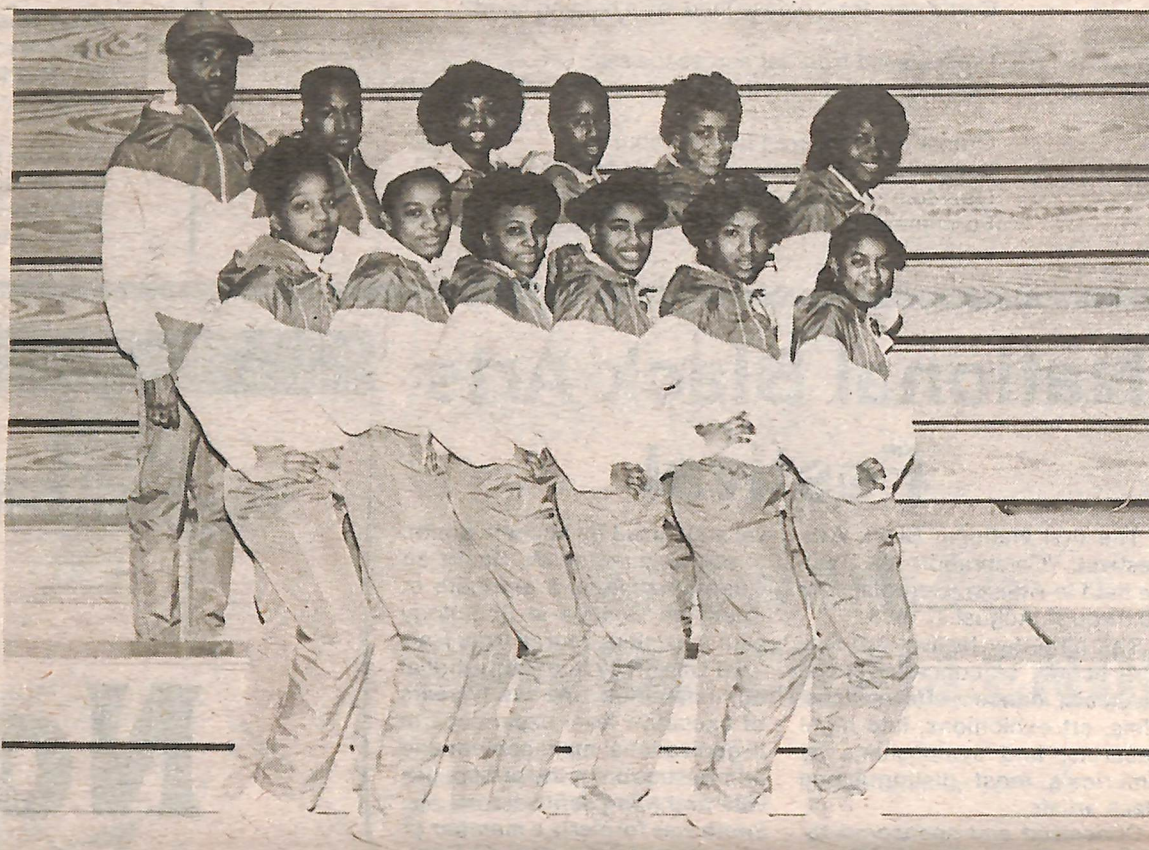

DelState's Women scored 116 points over South Carolina State's 84. Florida A&M followed in third and Howard University came in fourth.

"This year's team displayed more unity than any of the previous teams I had coached," said Sowerby. "Everyone contributed to the championship. All were involved in each other's performances, cheering them on as the meet progressed," he continued.

What can you say about a team which has won five straight MEAC championships? "Outstanding, stupendous, fantastic, and magnificent are only a few words," said Derrick Killings, a senior from Rochester, New York, majoring in Marketing.

For Gayle Gleaves and Joann Major, the two captains and seniors on the team, it was their last MEAC indoor track championship. "It will be one that I will never forget because everyone went out and participated to the best of their abilities," said Major. She continued, "Some were competing in events they have never performed in, such as Kenyatta Gadson in the shotput and Tanya McCray in the long jump."

Hornets Played Hard, But Lost

By Eugene Butler, Jr.

Well, the game was not a nail biter, but there was enough excitement to keep the crowd attentive. Otis Barbour combined with backcourt teammate Derrick Orr for 36 points and seven rebounds to lead Coppin State to a 90-64 victory over DelState.

The Coppin Eagles drew first blood on an Orr basket, and never looked back as Coppin knotted its overall record at 12-12, and improved their conference record to 7-5.

The Hornets sank 10 of 12 shots from the free throw line in the first half of the game for an uncanny 83 percent average. Unfortunately, they shot 25 percent from the field.

Coppin also posted three other players in double figures in scoring and led at the half 43-24.

The first half was overshadowed by the halftime festivities when Terrance Hoover, Delaware State's all-time leading rusher and second leading rusher in the history of the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference, was presented with the Toyota Leadership Award by a Toyota representative, for excelling both on and off the field. Hoover was also presented with a plaque by DelState's Head Football Coach, Bill Collick, and a $1,000 scholarship was donated to the school's Athletic Department in his name.

Tracey Wilson, the only senior on the Delaware State squad, opened the second half scoring with a quick lay-up and finished the night with 12 points.

The Eagles were up by 22 points at the 17:19 mark in the second half, but James "Sky Walker" Clarke converted a three-point play, and cut the lead to 19. That was the closest the Hornets could get in the closing minutes of the game.

Delaware State scratched and scraped, but they could not break the 19-point barrier. With some sloppy playing near the end of the game, the Eagles built a 26-point lead midway through the second half, which fell only two points below their game-high margin.

"Our kids are undersized, but they're playing hard and that's all that counts," said Coach Marshall Emery.

Paul Newman scored 15 points and James Clarke chipped in 14 points for the freshman-oriented

Delaware squad as they lost their 14th consecutive game.

"We played flat. And I think we played like that, because of the good performance we were coming off of in Washington (Howard University defeated DSC 69-59), and I think we left our enthusiasm down there," said Emery.

The Hornets have surrendered 90 points, or more, eight times this year and have fallen to 2-23 overall, and 1-14 in the MEAC.

Halftime Raffle Nets Funds to Support Track Programs

By Joann Major

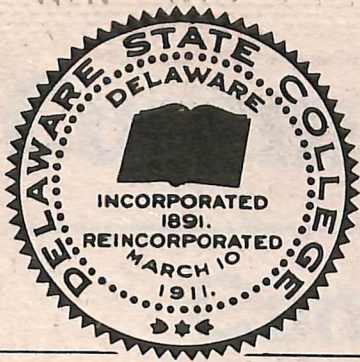

A raffle was held early this month to raise funds for the track programs at Delaware State College by the men's and women's track teams. The drawing for the raffle which took place at half time during the Hornets-North Carolina State basketball game, netted $1,126.

Prizes, donated by Nile Incorporated, a supporter of Women's track at the college, included a jogging suit, a pair of running shoes and a rainsuit.

The first prize went to Billy Caldwell of Baltimore, Maryland; second prize to Mark Harris, a student at DelState. Each winner received a gift certificate which must be mailed in to claim the prize.

According to Frederick Sowerby, women's track coach at DelState, "proceeds from this fund-raising event will go towards track meets." The East Coast Athletic Championship, slated for May 13-15 at George Mason University, Fairfax, Virginia, is among several meets for which the additional funds are needed. Other meets to benefit include the Tom Black Classic, Knoxville, Tennessee; TAC Championships, Tampa, Florida; and this year's Olympic Trials to be held in Indianapolis.

"We are hoping that the money made from the raffle will not have to take care of the athletes who are going to the NCAA Championships in Eugene, Oregon," Coach Sowerby disclosed.

Dr. De Lauder Raps with International Students

by Dumizo Joseph

DelState President, Dr. William B. DeLauder, honored the invitation of international students to a rap session and he met with them for over an hour and a half on March 22, in the Commuter Lounge of the MLK Student Center.

In what turned out to be an informal and interesting get-together that Tuesday night, the new president fielded questions from the students and answered a wide range of concerns about their stay at Delaware State College.

In his opening remarks, Dr. DeLauder expressed his support for the newly revived International Student Association and outlined his own desires to improve life for international students on campus and to establish foreign student and faculty exchange programs between the college and universities in other countries.

He also said that as soon as possible an office would be set up on campus to house the Association, thus setting the stage for an "International Center" at DelState in the future.

He further told the foreign students that he has plans to upgrade the quality and quantity of education at Delaware State, including the establishment of four schools within the college, which will better facilitate the students getting the high quality education for which they came to DelState.

Dr. DeLauder, who spoke about programs at other colleges and universities designed to enhance international understanding and cultural awareness, challenged the Association members to expose the campus to their cultures, to be productive and, when they graduate, to be good "Ambassadors" of Delaware State College.

Dumizo Joseph, president of the Association, thanked Dr. DeLauder for taking time off his busy schedule to meet with them and hoped that this would not be their only meeting.

Most of the students present thought that Dr. DeLauder spoke to them in a caring, fatherly, and consistent manner. Also present during the rap session was Dr. Momo K. Rogers, assistant professor in the English Department, and advisor to the Association.

State Funds Wall

by Eugene Butler Jr.

Under the direction of Gov. Michael Castle, the state has allotted $180,000 to Delaware State College for the construction of a five-and-a-half-foot high wall along the front of the campus.

"The purpose of the wall is to try to help the students cross the highway at its safest point, which happens to be at the entrance where the lights and crosswalk are," said Vice President of Fiscal Affairs, Edward T. Crawford.

The death of Anita Hughes, a student at DelState who was fatally injured while crossing Rt. 13 in 1985, forced the hands of both the State and the college to take safety measures.

"The wall is an outgrowth of the overpass across Rt. 13, which was supposed to be built, but that idea did not take into account the students who wanted to go to Nichols or southbound," added Crawford.

Shuttle vans have been used to substitute for the overpass, but many of the students going to the Dover Mall do not use the system.

"The Dover Mall bought one shuttle bus and the state said it would buy another and put up a fence along the front of the campus," said Crawford.

"The College hopes the wall will make the school more attractive and make the students proud of its appearance," noted Crawford.

The overall consensus by Delaware State College students is that the wall will make the school look like a correctional institution.

"The expected completion date of the wall is before the end of the 1988 spring semester. And if it had not been for the weather, the construction may have been completed by now," said Crawford.

Crawford also disclosed that Gov. Castle is planning to give another $180,000 to DelState in July to build an arch at the entrance of the wall.

Nursing Dept. Gains Accreditation

by Chantal David

The Nursing Department at Delaware State College was accredited on Oct. 12, 1987 by the National League for Nursing.

The Nursing Department, established approximately 13 years ago, is now headed by Ms. Marcella Copes, R.N., who has been the department chairperson for two years. Before becoming chairperson, she served as a faculty member for 11 years. When Copes became head of the department she, along with the board members, set some goals. Their first goal was to obtain accreditation for the program. In order to acquire the accreditation, an extensive self-studied document had to be written.

Their second goal was to have a procedure to admit already registered nurses who did not have a Bachelor's Degree. They are still Andrea Daniels, a senior, and Reginald Jones, a freshman, were female and male recipients of the 1988 "Student of the Year" award, sponsored by Michelob in conjunction with the MLK Student Center main office.

"I was surprised; it was a honor," said Daniels, an Accounting/Business & Marketing major, when she learned of winning the prestigious award.

Both Daniels and Jones, who could not be reached for comment, will receive a $250 Boscov's gift certificate and a plaque each. Daniels, who hails from Bermuda, will also appear in her hometown newspaper in that Caribbean nation.

Both recipients have been very active in campus activities. Dan-

The "Student of the Year" competition was open to all students. Other finalists for the award were Victoire Pratt, first runner-up, Cornelia Henry and Sara McCoy in the female category; Henry Kellogg, first runner-up and Howard Barnett and Jeffrey Cooper in the male category.

The award program originated from Michelob's involvement with Super Sports competition that began on the DelState campus four years ago, said Guy Buschler, the Michelob representative, who made the award presentations.

Average Drunk Driver

by Eugene Butler, Jr.

Commercials portray the typical drunk driver as being young and gullible, but contrary to media blitz, the average D.U.I (Drinking Under the Influence) offender is over 30 years old, according to Kent County DUI Evaluator, Valerie Willis.

No matter how many acronyms and organizations people think of, S.A.D.D., M.A.D.D., and P.A.D.D., the statistics do not change. Last year 6,403 offenders were arrested in Delaware.

Campus Pros & Cons

by Jean E. Wilson
Layout Editor and Reporter

In this, the second of four articles to appear in this column, we intend to address the question: "Are the students at D.S.C. special?" This is a question that someone might ask who intends to enroll at Delaware State College. It is a very natural thought to have when there is money to be spent for something. Besides, the average person wants to know how he or she is going to be treated or what should be expected in return.

DelState is a small campus, making the student-instructor relationship closer than most larger college campuses. Because of this, time is available for students to actually meet with their instructors without always being in the classroom.

There is much to be learned and improved upon, both in and out of the classroom by students. The potential of most students at DelState is very good. Thus, if we use as much as God has given us, this will bring out capabilities for great success. For it is one thing to be capable of succeeding and another to not even try to see how much you can achieve.

The instructors and advisors who are on DelState's campus are available for many reasons, such as:

— To instruct and to educate eager and some not-so-eager students.

— To advise and to guide students to progress.

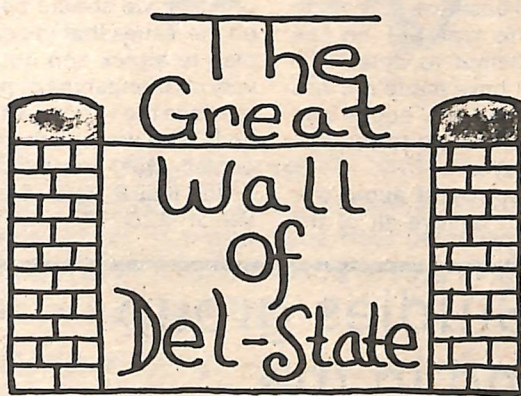

Without students at DelState, there would be no need for instructors or advisors. There would also be no need for classrooms, a student center, cashier's office, a dining hall, dormitories and other buildings. Finally, without the students, there would be no need for the people who work all over the college campus in different departments and functions.

Fortunately, the students are here, and many are very eager to learn and reach goals that could not be reached without a college degree.

As students at DelState, take advantage of the time and energy that you now have and don't waste valuable time. Nothing is perfect, but that is no reason to play around or give up.

After talking to several students and employees at DelState, they feel that most of the students here are special, as well as some instructors and staff. There are different student age groups on campus. I feel that students are different but unique, and that does include "Special." As a DelState student and writer of this column, I feel "Special" and so should every student at DelState.

In the next issue, this column will comment on "The Wall at D.S.C."

Since then, King Cobra has taken over Super Sports, and so the "Student of the Year" program was started.

"It is an opportunity to get involved in the community and with college students," Buschler said, adding: "Students work hard all year, and this is how Michelob rewards them."

Kermethia Stokes, assistant director of the MLK Student Center and coordinator of the award program, said that the competition for the award was an excellent opportunity for students, and urged more to participate in the future, because "there is really nothing to lose."

in the process of developing this procedure and hope to have it established by Fall 1988 or late Spring 1989.

Speaking about her department, Ms. Copes feels the nursing department is a very strong academic program. The department has graduated students from across the country who are working in industry, educational and health institutions, the armed forces, or are pursuing other degrees.

and only approximately 5 percent of that number were under 18 years of age.

According to Willis, the average offender fits the following description:

- 30 years old or older
- Most likely a smoker and consumes five or more packs of cigarettes per week.
- Probably has been arrested at least once in the past.
- Most likely lives alone or with relatives.
- Classifies himself/herself as a "social drinker."

"Usually 20 percent of the offenders I evaluate are repeat offenders within the last five years," added Willis.

The legal BAC (Blood Alcohol Content) level is .05. So far this year 750 people have exceeded that limit. With nine months remaining in 1988, it appears that the 6,403 offenders arrested last year may be topped.

The S.G.A.: Facts on Gossips

by Catherine Mathis

Lies, rumors, malicious gossip, call it what you may — who says I'm not one to gossip! But the students would like to know what's happening to our S.G.A. and what they are not doing for the students.

On March 24, 1988, the Student Government Association had its annual Spring Semester Convocation. This was not your ordinary convocation but an extraordinary one. As the Convocation was ending, Willis Lonzer, a junior, majoring in Chemistry and Pre-med popped on stage with great decorum and asked the Executive Board of the S.G.A. about their activities and challenged them to a question-and-answer period. Willis was not standing alone with his concerns. Conwell Hall Dorm Council has met on several occasions to discuss problems students are having.

Some of the problems facing dorm students include:

1. No heat on the third floor of Conwell Hall for the past two years.
2. Electricity all over campus goes out periodically.
3. No organizational meetings with the Vice President of the S.G.A. this year.

4. The resident manager of Jenkins Hall has been working on getting a stove for the 1st floor for the past two years...

These are not the only problems that have arisen, students are still complaining about the rumors that had it that S.G.A. President Bryant Plater has misappropriated over $14,000. We, the students have not heard any response from him or his administration about this matter. The question still remains: where is the money? Why do we have $3,000 left in the budget, when we started out with $92,000?

Curious students have not yet been satisfied by the response of the S.G.A. Executive Board members about reports of renting cars for their personal use. Students would like their thirst for the truth quenched by the S.G.A. response.

What about the malicious gossip that the S.G.A. is on strike, suspending a letter to the S.G.A. President advising him to decline his position, typed and signed by his Executive Board members. We the students and inquiring minds want to know! We the students challenge the S.G.A. to set a date!

Kellogg's Korner

by Henry Kellogg

In this section of my Korner I plan to announce my personal endorsement for the Student Government Association and my reasons why.

Before I do this, I would like to clear the air on a few things. First of all, for those who did not know, I had planned on running for the position of president of the SGA but instead, I merged with another individual and we formed the Unity Party with myself as vice-president.

Secondly, for those who do not understand the rationale behind that decision, I did this because I feel this person is the best possible candidate for president out of all the individuals who have shown interest.

Thirdly, I do not want to be considered a hypocrite because of my merger. I want everyone to know I still feel the same about the policies of our head administrator of the Student Government and what I questioned in the past and still question in, the organization of our SGA and the way the SGA kept the student body uninformed. Also, the money issue, which became at one point a major issue and still is the number one topic in the conversation of our more involved students but, from my understanding that situation is supposed to have cleared up. Even though, I do not believe it, because if the situation was cleared up our Student Government president would not hide from the topic. He would talk to us about it and besides if I was wrong about there ever being money missing from the very beginning the SGA and/or the administration would have called an emergency Convocation or meeting telling the student body that my acquisitions were wrong and I had no business spreading rumors of this type but, no one made an attempt to detest the statements I have made nor has anyone opened the books and made them available to the student body's eye.

One last comment about this situation is, I believe all of the executive student officials were not involved and had no prior knowledge of whatever has happened because, from the outside looking in you can see they meet very seldomly and they are lacking the most important element of unity... COHESION. I think the SGA has some (not all) good leaders and if they worked with the right individuals could make Delaware State's college atmosphere a better place for all the students. That's why I specifically endorse Anthony Walker as the next SGA president. I honestly believe he was kept in the dark about the money situation and believe he would be an asset to the student body because of the experience he gained through the administration. He has the ability and know-how to fight for the students and voice the ideals of the students to the administration for future changes.

It's that time of year when, spring is in the air, the flowers are blooming, the sun is shining, the Bumble Bee's are humming, and the 1988 Student Government Association Elections are coming.

We as students whether on-campus or commuters must exercise the prerogative to vote in the Student Government Elections because each vote counts. We must realize that this election is not for the president of the United States where the popular vote is the government's way of saying 'We the people of our United States elected the president' when, in reality the electorate does. This is Delaware State College where we have NO electorate and each individual plays an active role in electing our STUDENT OFFICIALS.

As far as electing our student officials, we should concentrate on the issues that the candidates plan to attack and not base our vote on friendships or popularity, but base the vote on who is qualified! Who will speak for the students!! Most important... WHO WILL KEEP THE STUDENTS INFORMED???

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor,

I am writing this letter because in the Spring of 1986 I was enrolled in a Management course taught by Dr. Raymond Grandfield and was given a very unfair grade. I am about to graduate from Delaware State College and if this grade is not corrected, it will leave a bitter taste in my mouth.

This issue has been through every channel on campus that deals with academic problems and everyone agreed that the grade given was unfair. Yet, no one had the guts to change it. In talking to some students, this is one of the reasons why many students who graduate do not support Delaware State after they leave.

Based on previous problems with student athletes, my coach, Mr. Frederick Sowerby, wrote a letter to Dr. Grandfield at the beginning of the semester to let him know that I was a scholarship athlete on the women's track team, and as such would miss a few classes. In addition, every time I was due to miss a class I gave him an official notification in advance, asking him to excuse the absences and allow me to make up any work that I missed.

When I presented these notifications to Dr. Grandfield, he smiled and said to me that everything was o.k. and that I would be excused.

During the course of the semester I missed Dr. Grandfield's class a total of nine (9) times; eight (8) were excused absences. Seven (7) were excused for track, one was a class trip for a communications course, and for the other, my guardians made me stay home because I had a temperature of 102°. Unfortunately for me, the day I stayed home, Dr. Grandfield gave a test, which I missed. I therefore received an "F" even though it was felt that since one of my guardians works for the College as a part-time Registered Nurse, I could obtain an official excuse.

There were five other tests given in the course, including the final. I made 3 A's and 2 B's. I had six test grades in the class, but I received a grade of 'C' in the course, which upset me.

From this simple computation the only fair grade that would reflect my ability and per the policy of Delaware State College is a "B". Dr. Grandfield was then called to justify my grade. He insisted that I missed too many classes; therefore, I could not participate. He further stated that I received an "F" for participation and attendance. He was then asked if I participated when I was in class and he said "yes."

Dr. Grandfield was told that the grade was unfair because the policy of the school clearly states that no student's grade may be reduced solely on the basis of absences.

At the time of this incident, I was a sophomore in good academic standings. (Now I'm a senior). I worked very hard in study hall and at home. When I first came to Del-state, I was admitted at risk, but I now carry an accumulative grade point average of 2.9. In spite of hard work in my classes, I am a Division I All-American in Track.

One of the goals I had set for myself was to be an Academic All-American. But thanks to Dr. Grandfield I may never achieve this goal.

Education Majors Meet Recruiters From 44 School Districts

By Yvonne Figueroa

Forty-four different school districts from 13 states participated in Delaware State College's Teacher Recruitment Day, an event designed to assist education majors in seeking teaching positions.

The event was held on March 23, in DSC's Martin Luther King Student Center, from 8 a.m. until 3:30 p.m.

Mary Merritt, associate director of the Career Planning and Placement Office, said everyone in the Career Planning and Placement Office had a hand in organizing the event. To arrange the uniting of recruiters and the students, Merritt sent out notices to the school districts and students and arranged matchups for interviews.

Merritt said the day long event allowed graduating students to seek employment from hiring school districts. The pre-scheduled interviews, said Merritt, were just for education majors. However, she said this is not intended to leave out other majors, because Career Day is organized for everyone, but rather to give education majors a good shot at perspective employment opportunities.

The participating schools came from as far south as Texas to as far north as Massachusetts.

Representatives of three school districts spoke about the type of potential employees they are looking for. These include certified students with teaching experience, a strong interest in teaching, and a good academic record.

A representative of the New Haven Board of Education, Connecticut, said the district is looking for all kinds of people, including those with expertise in different fields as well as those from various ethnic backgrounds. New York's Buffalo Board of Education representative, Mary L. Glatt, said they want well rounded people who want to teach in an urban environment. The Anne Arundel Schools, Maryland, look at GPA's, references, experience and knowledge of instruction. They also said that their specific area of need is in special education.

The starting salary at the New Haven District is the highest of the three districts interviewed. They felt that their $24,850 salary gives them the edge needed for recruitment. Sharon Esdale, director of the Arts Magnet School and representative for the district, said the salary should help them obtain teachers who can concentrate on teaching and not have to "moonlight" because of financial need.

Admissions Office Plans New Recruitment Video

by Victoire Pratt

The Office of Admissions is working on a new video designed to attract and recruit more students to Delaware State College, said Jethro C. Williams, director of Admissions, during a recent interview in his office.

Speaking about a video presentation done four years earlier, Williams said, "It was extremely effective, which is why we decided to go ahead with it again, but this one will be more in depth." He added, "The other one centered on why our students chose Del-State, but this one (the new video) will tell them more about our academic programs."

"The main aim of the new video will be to recruit students directly from the local high schools," he noted.

"Most high schools now have videos set-up where students can go in and view the tapes," Williams said.

Asked why the emphasis on mostly local high schools, Williams said, "The bulk of students will still come from Delaware; only 30 percent can come from out-of-state, by law."

"Attracting students interested in the sciences, pre-professional programs, pre-med, math, computer sciences, and the liberal arts is the goal of the video," he said.

"Department chairpersons will be asked to select students to appear in the video," Williams said, speaking about its content. "There will be a scene with a group of students talking with Dr. (William) DeLauder; these students will be chosen at random." This will be Dr. DeLauder's first appearance on a recruiting video since becoming president of the college in July 1987.

The new video will be used for the first time during the 10th Annual High School Day, scheduled for April 14 this year. The high school day program is sponsored by the Admissions Office each year. "Every high school in the state is invited, and Alumni chapters usually bring students from their local high schools," Williams said.

The annual event draws about 1,500 to 2,000 participants, Williams disclosed. During the program, students browse around booths designed by each department to get information that may interest them, tour the campus, and then watch the video, Williams said.

Besides the academic activities, entertainment is also planned for the students, including a Greek step show, a jazz band performance, and pep talks by the SGA President and Miss Delaware State College.

Poet's Arena

Rapp

by Edward Butler Jr.

In this era and in this time,
Young blacks express themselves through the rhyme.
The only way for some to get glory,
Is to sing a song about their life story.
Whether the truth or figment of imagination,
They earn money and a quick reputation.

Many in the cities use this as an occupation.
Others simply exercise it as a recreation.
For those of you who still don't understand,
These words I've written with my hand.
It's a race that's striving to get a point across,
That we as people are no longer lots.

Vexed, An Adament Adaption

by Willie Sheppard

That electric smell of a woman's hell,
Intriguing and mine for the taking.
So I played along, but it wasn't long.
Fatal attraction had left me there shaking.

A basic scheme, forced an intricate theme,
My strength grew helplessly thin.
She softened my head, with no words she said,
Just a taste of her golden red skim.

Stop she cried, while the mood all but died,
I cared so I started agreeing...
Said she wanted a friend, more so than to sin,
Should I give her the whole of my being.

Our passion then paused, the full moon was the cause,
We stood face to face in desire.
Temptation would blossom, while she played possum...
Was she hoping to finally perspire?

Can't find her in text, an original sex,
More woman than I had conceived.
No my soul needs repair, she just left me there,
And my ego must now be retrieved.

To: Mr. F. Sowerby

by Joann Major

As I ponder over the four years I spent at Delaware State
You were the one I can say who really made it great.
From an island many miles across the sea,
You came and got me and made me to be.

At first I found it hard to accept
But you assured me that later I would be blessed.
I came and was placed entirely in your care.
Knowing that day in and day out you would always be there.

There when I needed you and needed you not.
Even at times when I thought you had forgot.
Cared because you knew I would someday succeed
Despite all that was said about me and my bad deeds.

You were the one who guided me all the way
In times when I didn't even know what to say
Times when I felt like going home
By assuring me that it would be over soon.

School graduation day when I walked that path
You will be the one closest to my dearest heart.
For without you who knows where I would be
Probably somewhere in the Bahamas, idling in the sand, sun and sea.

TROUBLES

by Joseph S. Knipe

Sometimes in life, though it's sad,
Things just go astray.
No matter how hard we try,
there's just nothing we can do or say.

So comes the time in all of our lives,
when our eyes fill and tears fall as rain.
This is just one of life's many twists,
and fate is the only culprit to be blamed.

But through this rain, as always comes,
a fresh crisp sky of blue.
Your mind is so much clearer now, with thoughts so bold and new.

So when the skies darken, as they always must,
and you feel your rain tears begin.
Maybe you'll remember this poem, and just maybe you won't find a frown, but a grin.

Being Me

by Dwight Allen

I like being me, because I feel happy, I feel so free!
A lot of people are not happy, with that they are, if they are not proud of themselves, they will not get too far.
There are teenagers who talk about the clothes that I wear, I am going to be myself, I do not care!
When you are being yourself, I feel that you are one of a kind, with your special capabilities, it's hard to copy, it is hard to find.
In conclusion, when all goes well, I hope you will agree, that it pays off being me.

Ask

Lolo Darling,

I'm healthy. I'm wealthy. But I have no one to share this with. I am very fond of a certain beautiful woman from Philadelphia, but she is taken. She knows I like her, because when he's not around we have beautiful conversation. I think she's somewhat interested, hopefully! Should I take her away from him or be a nerd and leave her be?

Signed,
Ready to Attack

P.S. Just for you people who are quite curious, here's a little hint for you. She sings beautifully and looks gooooooood!!!!

Dear Ready,

If this beautiful woman is responding to your advances, I think you should follow up. But if she's giving you the cold shoulder, step off. Personally I think it would be in your best interest if you left her alone because you know she already has a man and you would only be playing second fiddle.

Lolo Baby,

As an upperclassman of this institution, I hate to see drugs get around, I feel we as blacks especially, should get together and read, write and erase this problem girlfriend, word. How do you feel?

Signed,
Big Daddy Caine

Lolo

males here want one thing and one thing only! It takes a woman to be able to deal with the ups and downs of a real, substance containing relationship. We lack these qualities in over 90% of the female species here at D.S.C.

Please help find us eligible bachelors some REAL women.

Sincerely,
A Real Man

Dear Real Man,

It's not fair to say that over 90% of the females on campus are little girls. Your problem is that you just haven't found the right one.
You should look at the situation from a female's point of view.
Have you been a true blue, down to earth gentleman? If not, then you have no reason to complain.

Lolo

Hello Lolo,

Many people have said that I am the GIGOLO of all Gigolos.
I'm not a Gigolo I just like women a lot.

You know me, what do you think?

Suave Bolla

Dear Suave Bolla,

You're not a gigolo. I think you're just a healthy young man with a large appetite for the opposite sex. I see nothing wrong with that. Just be careful, the next disease you catch could be a killer.

Lolo

Dear Big Daddy Caine,

You are 100% right. Drugs are a major problem on campus. What I suggest you do to stop the circulation is tell your friends to just say no. I know you have the influence because you're just such a popular guy.

Lolo

Yo Lo,

Hi you dooin'? I'll call myself
Rashid from Nort (North) Philly.
hoooooo. Are you going to tell us who you are one day? All right then, I'll get back.

Later

Rashid Muhammad

Dear Rashid,
NO!!!

Later

Lolo

Dear Lolo,

I hope all finds you well.
Lolo, there seems to be a bit of a problem here at D.S.C. I have come to find that there are too, too many little girls on this campus, and not enough women. Fe-

What do you think of the way the administration is running the college???

Chukwuemera Kings Okorie
Marketing Major

Nigeria

Not very impressive, for instance, tutors should be employed to teach the students in their area of specialization. Also, we need lots of current book editions in the library.

Jocelyn Jackson
Marketing Major
Senior
Baltimore, Maryland

I feel as though the administration thinks of the students as just being their meal ticket. To improve student-administration relationships, the administration should mingle more with the students, to get to know them on a one on one basis.

Philmore Parkes
Math/Computer Science Major
Junior
Jamaica, N.Y.

I think the administration is doing an unfit job. They show no interest in the welfare of the students or school. It would seem to me, for a group of people with degrees in some form of management, the decisions they make are of a juvenile level, not a college graduate.

Keisha J. Higdon
Marketing Major
Junior
Rochester, New York

The administration will be doing a very good job when they get the students involved. Because the decisions that are made effect us and our future! The Administrators have already lived their lives and received their education. And now they are implementing how it should have been for the. But little do they know that no one knows what is best for DelState's student body except the student body.

Kimberly Hairston
Journalism Major
Sophomore
Piscataway, N.J.

I feel as though the administration has made an effort, however the effort seems to be a slim one, as far as getting the students involved because we need to be aware of what takes place at Delaware State College because this is our FUTURE!

Delaware State Family Mourns Death of Mr. J. Howell

It is with deepest sympathy that we announce the death of Mr. John Howell, Associate Professor from the Agriculture and Natural Resources Department. Mr. Howell passed on Saturday, March 19.

A Memorial Service, dedicated to Mr. Howell, was held on Tuesday, March 22 in the Auditorium of the John R. Price Business Administration-Home Economics Building.

John Teekay Howell was born on February 25, 1921 in Cherryville, North Carolina, the second of ten children and the son of The Reverend Fred and Mrs. Gertrude Howell. He died suddenly on March 19, 1988 in Dover, Delaware.

After serving in World War II, Mr. Howell finished his education at Hampton Institute, graduating with a Bachelor of Science Degree in 1947. His pursuit for education did not stop there. In 1952 he received his Master of Science Degree from Michigan State University and later enrolled as a doctoral candidate at Oregon State University, where he completed his course work, and also served as a County Agent in the Cooperative Extension Service while going to school.

Professional organizations that Mr. Howell belonged to include: American Horticultural Society, American Vocational Association,

Mr. John Howell

Wintherthur Museum and Gardens, National Trust for Historic Preservation, Pennsylvania Horticultural Society and The Franklin Mint Collectors Society. Mr. Howell was a member and Trustee of Union Baptist Church. He had also taught Sunday School.

Mr. Howell's career in education began as a teacher in agriculture in the public schools of North Carolina. After receiving his Masters Degree, he joined the faculty at Delaware State College in September 1952 as a teacher in the Department of Agriculture, and at the time of his death was an Associate Professor in the Department.

Mr. Howell will be remembered by those who knew him best as a strong believer in vocational agriculture with an emphasis on practical application of his subject matter.

He will be remembered as a "real gentleman" with a genuine interest in his students.

Campus Sports Profile: 1,2,3, Babby... 1,2,3, Boys...

by Joann Major

Frederick Oliver Sowerby was born on an island in the Caribbean called Monserrat. In 1953, he moved to Antigua where he spent most of his childhood years before moving to the United States in 1969, to attend college after working for 2½ years as a civil servant.

At the age of 20, he was awarded a track scholarship to Murray State University where he earned a Bachelor of Science degree in Health and Physical Education and Business Management. While at Murray State, he was many times an all-Conference performer and a two-time All-American.

After graduating in 1973, he competed in the 1976 Olympics and was selected for the 1980 Olympic team for Antigua, but was unable to compete because of the U.S.-led boycott. Sowerby, who is also called "King of the Boards," held two World Records at 500 and 600 meters indoors. He was also a three-time U.S. Indoor Champion.

Sowerby began coaching in 1973 at St. Albans High School in Washington, D.C., and had success immediately, winning the school's first Intra-State Championship. In 1975, he founded D.C. International Track Club which later went on to gain national and international prominence.

In September of 1978, he became an assistant coach at the University of Maryland, College Park, where he developed several All-Americans. In August of 1980, he was appointed Head Coach, Track and Cross Country for men and women at the University of Maryland Eastern Shore, where he led his team to their first championship in 17 years. He was cited by the Maryland General Assembly for his contributions to track and field in the State. In 1983, he moved to Dover and became Head Coach of Delaware State College. For his career at DelState, we conducted the following interview:

Hornet: When you arrived at Delaware State College, did you set any specific goals for yourself or the team?

Sowerby: I made several predictions that some of my co-workers had a problem with. They felt that I was just talking and I would not be able to do the things I was talking about. The predictions were that I would improve the academic status, produce All-Americans and Olympians and finally sweep every conference championship I participated in. I have fulfilled all of my predictions except sweeping the conference, which I plan to do this year.

Hornet: So far you have won five MEAC indoor championships and four men's and women's cross country titles; how do you feel about these accomplishments?

Sowerby: It is important to win conference championships but I really don't attach a lot of significance to the MEAC. Participating and performing well at the Regionals and National levels is where I place more emphasis. This year we have not fared well regionally or nationally. The team lacks desire. There is no leader in training to set the tone and this is something we have always had. As a result we are not getting the quality workouts to perform well regionally or nationally.

Hornet: You have enjoyed a certain amount of success coaching. How has this helped you nationally?

Sowerby: Well, of course, there was the Coach of the Year Award, then Head Coach at the National Sports Festival, selected for participation in the National Coach's Summit which meets three times a year at the Olympic Training Center in Colorado and being selected to the National Sports Festival Committee.

Hornet: Do you feel that Track is fully supported by DelState's student body?

Sowerby: I don't feel that Track is fully supported strongly by the student body, faculty or staff.

Hornet: You were the first to start an official study hall where team members must attend Sunday through Thursday; how has this contributed to the academic success of your program?

Sowerby: Well, my first recruiting class is due for graduation this year. Of the six recruited, four will graduate on time, one in December and the other is no longer here. All five will have the grade point average necessary for graduate school and that speaks for itself.

Hornet: It is said that some students refuse to run track here at Delaware State because of your strict rules. Is this so?

Sowerby: I think there is more to college besides partying and having a good time. I make agreements with parents that I will monitor their daughters. This involves academic progress as well as what they do socially.

A lot of students get upset because they want to do as they please, and this will not happen if they run for me. I also do not tolerate dormitory violations. This does not go over well with most students and they do not enjoy coming to the library 5 days a week. I think that this is essential for the continuity of the program.

Hornet: It is also said that you don't like your team dating the football players. Is this true?

Sowerby: Several of my athletes date football players, but there are those who behave like bullies and everything but college students. These students are not just football players. I also want to make it clear that the behavior of the team has drastically improved. But to say that it is a "No-no" for track girls to date football players is not true. However, I would like for the young men that the ladies on my team date to be gentlemen who will treat them with love and respect.

Hornet: There have been friendly arguments between football players and track members concerning which team brings the most publicity to the school. What is your view on this issue?

Sowerby: The track team has appeared on every major network in the U.S. and even though the football team is making great strides towards appearances on major networks, it has not done so yet, so I have to say that women's track has the edge.

Hornet: How has the athletic department responded so far to the achievements of your programs?

Sowerby: That question is very difficult to answer, but I will try to answer it. My team members have have complained constantly about poor treatment for their efforts. Perhaps this is why the current team is not motivated to train as hard as the previous teams. Recently, there has been some improvements. I understand that Dr. Motley and Mr. Martin have promised rings for this year's championships. This shows that there is a definite movement to show appreciation for the efforts of the teams.

Hornet: How long are you planning to stay at DelState?

Sowerby: There are 5 conferences that I would leave Delaware State for. They are Big 10, Big 8, South Eastern, South West and the Atlantic Coast. If I cannot have a position at one of these conferences then I will be at DelState for a long time. Besides, the Head Coach positions at these schools are all filled.

In October of 1986, Coach Sowerby was inducted into the Athletic Hall of Fame at Murray State University for his accomplishments in track and field.

The Babby Boys won the Delaware State College intramural basketball Championship on Thursday, March 24, 1988, which marked their third championship in four years.

The Babby Boys originated its team from a group of football players, mostly defensive personnel, at the completion of the 1983 football season; however, due to a shortened tournament that year, the Babby Boys were not able to compete. Since then, the Babby team has dominated the intramural basketball tournament. And with the exception of their loss in the 1987 season, they have compiled an unofficial 19-1 record, including their 72-30 blowout victory over the Nupes of Kappa Alpha Psi for the 1988 tournament championship.

The 1988 tournament was a 16-game, single-elimination tournament, which placed the Babby Boys against mostly stiff competition. Their first victory came against the Hawks, in a lopsided 61-29 victory. From there they defeated the Troopers, in a hard-fought 13-point victory. Next up for the Babby Boys were the fired-up Shoot Outs, who initially gave the Babby Boys all they could handle in the first half of play, matching them bucket for bucket. In the second half the Babby Boys applied good full court pressure on the Shoot Outs, making way for their third tournament triumph; setting the stage for th championship game against the Kappas, who made it to the finals by upsetting the Iota team in double overtime.

The Babby Boys wasted little time in disposing of the undermanned Kappa squad. Afterwards, Mr. Harry Moses, the director of Delaware State's intramural program, presented the Babby Boys their trophies.

ATHLETIC Convocation Revived at Del State

by Victoire Pratt

Attempts are being made to renew interest in the Athletic Convocation program, which was started last fall after athletes requested gospel services, according to Elaine Bowers, coordinator of the program.

Many team members requested gospel services since they were on the road so much, said Bowers, who is transcript clerk in the DSC records office. Therefore, Coach William Collick asked her to coordinate the Athletic Convocation, she said.

"I try to have a different speaker every month, and at least one choir," she said.

In the beginning, the John R. Price Auditorium was packed every time, but gradually attendance began to dwindle, Bowers said.

A chapel for all faiths is being formed by a group of people in the community of different faiths, she said. It will be in Conrad Hall on the second floor, and should be completed no later than September this year, she said. "Reverend Rudolf Barnes is spearheading that project," Bowers said.

Joan W. Williamson, a licensed minister and Delaware State College Accounting instructor, was the key speaker at the last convocation held March 23, 1988, in the John R. Price Auditorium.

Williams said she likes to see athletes praise God publicly and thank Him for their successes.

"If you allow Him, God will help you in your career," she told the small audience of students and faculty.

"New Dawn," the guest choir, performed two selections. Its members are Barbara Goode, Deborah Johnson, Lorene K. Robinson, Dorothy Carter, Deveria Johnson, Eleanor Hamm, Jean Patterson, and piano player, Henrietta Dumas.

The next Athletic Convocation will be held April 7, at 7 p.m. in the John R. Price Auditorium. The speaker will be Rev. Richard Avart, and the "Voices of Calvary" will be the guest choir.

FAA Recruiting For 3,000 air Traffic Controller Jobs

The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration, Alan McArtor, announced today that FAA plans to hire approximately 3,000 men and women over this year and train them for careers as air traffic control (ATC) specialists.

McArtor said, "The hiring of the new recruits will enable FAA to keep pace with the projected growth of aviation by maintaining the current pipeline of trained personnel to fill newly established ATC specialist positions as well as positions vacated through retirements, transfers, promotions and other personnel moves."

All new hires receive their initial ATC training as paid employees at the FAA Academy in Oklahoma City. Most are hired at a base salary of $18,726. Those that successfully complete the Academy course -- which runs three or four months, depending on the option -- then will be assigned Al Dulaney Show Billed As...

Since 1983, the Al Dulaney Show has been a major second semester attractions on campus.

Al Dulaney, resident manager for Tubman Hall and Wynder Towers, is and has been the host for the last five shows. The acts include gospel and classical singing, jazz, dancing and comedy.

The show is open to students who enjoy displaying their talent. Dulaney said, "Self gratification is my motivation." There are no awards for the participants or the host. He also stated that "The show is not a talent show, it's just a night of fun."

This year's show originally scheduled for March 21, was rescheduled for April 26th in the Education Humanities building theater.

A Glimpse At America's Best Secret

By Josphe D. Johnson

What four attributes do Andre Dawson, Doug Williams, Jerry Rice, Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, Walter Payton, Vince Coleman, and Willis Reed have in common? They are all male. That's one. Black. That's two. Athletes. That's three. What's four?

Every one of them entered professional sports from historically black colleges. Namely, Florida A&M, Grambling, Jackson State, and Mississippi Valley State.

I bring that up to poke a hole in a myth: A mistaken notion that a black athlete must attend a predominantly white college or university to be able to successfully pursue a career in professional sports after graduation.

If that myth were reality, the Andre Dawson's (the National League's MVP in 1987); the Doug Williams (MVP for Super Bowl XXII) of this world would enjoy a rewarding college career then drop from sight. The reality is that a good athlete will get noticed no matter which school he attends. That brings up another very important point: attending and graduating from a historically black school is no less valuable -- either athletically or academically -- than attending a predominantly white school.

Before I began my own business last year, I was a vice president of Personnel and Organization for Xerox Corporation. In that capacity, I met and worked with engineers from Prairie View; math majors from Jackson State and Lincoln University; systems analysts from Hampton and Grambling; and a Xerox business division president, Bernard Kinsey, who graduated from Florida A&M.

And three graduates of my alma mater, Lincoln University in Missouri -- Earl Wilson, the European Director of Marketing for IBM; Stan Scott and Thomas Shrosphere, senior vice president of Philip Morris have also made solid contributions in the business world.

These people are certainly just as successful, and in some cases more so, than their black friends who went to predominantly white colleges or universities.

I am proud to be an alumni of Lincoln and my graduation from a black university certainly didn't hold me back, isn't holding me back and won't ever hold me back.

What can hold blacks back is --all too frequently--their inability to get a quality education at a predominantly white college.

That's brought about because they must--because of the environment -- deal with race relations issues, which take time and sap energy. At a black college, race isn't an issue. Getting a good education is.

Athletically and academically, black colleges have a role to play. More of our black young people should recognize this fact and take advantage of one of the best kept secrets in America.

Women's AD HOC Committee Needs Support of DSC Family

by Erna Jones

The Delaware State College Women's Ad Hoc Committee of the faculty Senate needs support in establishing a program to assist in fulfilling the "Mission" of Delaware State College, to enlighten the campus of women, their roles and contributions to society.

The committee was founded in the Fall of 1985 by Dr Ruth Mattingly and is currently chaired by Dr Anne H. Jenkins, associate professor in the English Department.

According to Dr. Jenkins, the committee is striving to maintain Delaware State as a progressive liberal arts institution that endeavors to provide a well-rounded liberal arts education. She also said it provides services to the citizens, develops conceptual thinking and nurtures the minds of men and women.

The overall goal of the Women's Studies Committee, according to Dr Jenkins is to, "Expand and extend the scope of learning exchange, and creative expression regarding women in the United States and abroad, for enlightenment of the Delaware State College family, communities, citizens of the State of Delaware, people in the business, industry and management, the professions and lay persons across the nation and abroad, who are interested in new ways of understanding themselves and others."

On April 26, 1988, the Womens Study Committee conducted a tribute to Mothers, Daughters and Wives.

The Committee's organization room is now located in Kent Hall, room 202. For more information, contact Dr Jenkins, room 244 in the Education Humanities Building, extension 35065.

Letters to the Editor:

Dear Editor:

On April 12, 1988, I was abruptly approached by Sonia Peebles, Treasurer of the SGA, and told that I was no longer to hold my position of Executive Assistant to the President on the SGA Executive Board.

To my knowledge no petition for my recall has been submitted to the SGA President as required in the constitution of the SGA.

As of April 12, 1988, I have received no official notice of any problems that exist. I feel I am being unfairly persecuted for writing an article in the Hornet which was published on April 8, 1988. The article was written to communicate a point to the SGA and to say to students that the gossip and rumors in relation to the SGA have no facts to back them up.

As I have not had any problems on the Executive Board, I feel that the April 8, 1988 article is the only reason that I'm being unprofessionally approached by Sonia Peebles. If in fact this is the reason, I am requesting that an official typewritten letter of apology be given to me from Sonia Peebles and the SGA Executive Board, if she was acting on their behalf.

Dear Editor:

Last week in the lounge at Conwell Hall, there was a Dorm meeting which featured guest speakers, Dean Lightfoot and Dr. Motley. They came to the meeting to try and bridge the communication gap, and also try to solve the problems that exist between the Faculty and the Students. One of the problems that was discussed at the meeting was the removal of refrigerators from Students rooms after the Easter break. Now why would the school wait until the end of the Semester to tell us to remove the refrigerators when they had all year to tell us?

It just seems to me that Administration think they can make any decision concerning us and we should accept it without any questions from the students. They are dead wrong. If Dr. Motley and Dean Lightfoot want to have a better relationship with the students, forcing rules and regulations on us will not help. The new Student Improvement Committee that was formed at the meeting is a step in the right direction. I just hope it is not too late to change things before something gets out of hand, because I would like to tell my friends with pride that I go to DELAWARE STATE COLLEGE, but right now I can't.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Delaware State College Student Body
FROM: Gladys D.W. Motley, Vice President for Student Affairs.
DATE: April 15, 1988
RE: Student Government Association Budget

In response to recent allegations that a large sum of money was misplaced by the Student Government Association, please note that there is no proof of misappropriation of funds by the Student Government Association. There is, however, a need for ongoing accurate record keeping.

In the future, the Student Government Association and other organizations will be required to follow established procedures regarding financial transactions. Student leaders will be provided training through workshops, seminars, etc., to enhance their business management skills and to enable them to prepare accurate monthly financial reports for Delaware State College and its student body.

One aspect of the advisement process, under my supervision, will consist of the Student Government Association advisors and the Dean of Student Services closely monitoring the Student Government Association budget.

ACROSS CONTINENTS

by Dumizo Joseph

The International Students Association of Delaware State College held a Food Sale on Wednesday, April 20, in the lobby of the Education & Humanities Center building between 11 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. The Food Sale, which featured mostly African dishes, turned out to be a huge success as the response to this event being held for the first time was positive and the entire stock of food was completely sold out by 1 p.m.

The foodstuffs sold included jollof rice and fried chicken prepared the African way. For the non-adventurers, hot dogs were also sold. Surprisingly, those who visited the food sale paid special attention to the jollof rice. Many students as well as faculty and staff were excited by the exotic taste of the African traditional cooking, which many were tasting for the first time. Besides, the prices were exceptionally cheap and the expression on everyone's face was that of satisfaction and appreciation for tasting something different.

The occasion was also highlighted by continuous vibration of music from Africa, the Caribbean, South America, and India. Nobody left the scene without asking the Association's executive officers the date of the next food sale. To all adventurers of cultures, the food sale will continue next fall with more varieties of food from each continent, including other cultural awareness programs like music and fashions from other countries.

Our sincere thanks to all those participants who made this food sale a success and we promise to bring more such events to your attention in academic 1988-89.

"Determined One"

Poem By Dwight Allen

I want to strive to become the best, I know I'm going through a mental test. Determination is in my soul, being successful is the key, I must reach my goal, it's going to take patience and all of me.

There are days that are cloudy, sometime I'm discouraged and down, do I have what it takes? I believe I do, the days may be cloudy now, but there will come a day of sunshine, my heart will shine with happiness, I've made up my mind and I'm not turning back, all what's behind is a color negative situation that is dark and black. Oneness is Unity, I must be willing to go all the way, the rewards will come one day.

My heart is hungry for that goal. I'm feeding it along the way, with patience and determination.

I must not let anything, anyone or anybody stop me, I have power, that is called mind, I must use it against things that hinder me, the clouds are gone, the pain is no longer strong, doubts no longer belong, perhaps a shining glare is penetrating through your soul from the sun, you've achieved your hearts desire, you're the "DETERMINED ONE".

Americans Are Confused

By Erna Jones

Americans are confused. On Sundays they get dressed for church, only to leave early to play Lotto. On Friday nights they pray for forgiveness for what they've done and do it again on Saturday. They make their beds only to mess them up again at night.

They are confused. If the doorbell rings they say "Who the hell is it?" and in the same breath say "God bless you" if someone sneezes. In the summer they intentionally bake themselves on the beach and complain about skin cancer later. Women pray for long hair, grow it and cut it all off. Children want to know who Santa is, find out and cry for days. Confusion is definitely the problem. They love food but constantly diet. They want white teeth but smoke cigarettes. They love life but commit suicide.

To That Special Person

If Only Eyes Could Talk

If they could tell you who I am
If they could tell you how I feel
If only eyes could talk everytime
They see you they have to look twice.
Why, because they can't believe a Person is as beautiful as you are

If only eyes could talk eyes, they Could be a shy man's weapon blind
Man's lense, wise man's tool.
Sometimes what we see through them
Is fake, fantasy, or real.

But when I see you I see life at it's Highest form.
If only eyes could talk.

Thanks For Caring

By Dwight Pleasant

There is a girl that cares about me so much
That when she looks at me, that is a friendly touch.
With a girl as coaring as she can be,

There is nothing else in the world that I need.

All I need is her friendship near,
And I can have happiness for years.
Years without a tear or a pout,
Just knowing that her love is about.

If her love would ever happen to go away,
I wouldn't know what to do or say.
I would probably break down and cry,
Or even just lay down and die.

So you see how important her love is to me,
Without her love I don't know what would be of me.

All I am trying to say,
Is thanks for caring from day to day.

By Dwight Pleasant

I never want to forget the days gone by,
I never want to forget the reasons why,
The reasons why we became such good friends,
The reasons why our friendship will never end.

I always want to remember the good times we had,
I also want to always remember the bad.
I want to remember these things for all the days I live,
So I can remember how strong our friendship won't go wrong.
It is not because there is help from the heaven's above,
It is because of the thing called love.

The Last Battle

By Joseph S. Knipe

Pools of blood lay over the ground.
Rotted bodies still can be found,
yet silence is the only sound.

Burning rubble and thrown debris,
we have won the last battle now we are free.
Oh God! why do they bury me?

Space

By Joseph S. Knipe

Endless room with peaceful beauty.
Beauty unmatched anywhere.
Stars of the universe glisson,
as frozen dew drops hanging from a spiders web.
Tranquility as I have never known on Earth.
A feeling of togetherness, being ne with the Universe.

I'll Be There

By Dwight Pleasant

When you are feeling lonely and can't win give a smile,
Lift your head up high, because there are better things you can do for awhile. If you are still feeling bad, and down
And out, please just try not to shout or pout.

Because you have friends that care about you,
No matter if it is bad or good that you do,
And to have friends like that are hard to come by,
Because some people may say they are your friend, but it's All a lie.

So the next time things aren't going your way,
It is not a psychiatrist that you will have to pay.
Because you can always go to a close friend,
And I will be there for you til the very end.

By Dwight Pleasant

Why am I always getting picked on, it doesn't come to an end,
Why am I the only person, that has to live without a friend.
Why am I always so sad and never so gay,
Why can't I be happy all through the day?

Why am I always hurt deep down inside,
Why is it this hurt, that I always try to hide.
Why am I so shy, not showing my true self,
Is it because I am in serious need of help.

In need of a friend who is caring and kind,
But this kind of friend is hard to find.
So why am I the only one always searching for a friend,
Will this search ever come to an end.

Telling it like it is can make you a winner.

Ask Lolo

Dear Lolo,

I am a female student at Del State and I have an original problem. Since my freshman year, I have been involved in a homosexual relationship. I love my lover a great deal, but recently I have been eyeing this young man and I think there is a possibility that we may get together. The problem is, I don't know what to tell my girlfriend. I don't want to hurt her and I'm not sure if I want my future boyfriend to know about my past. I need help. What is your advice. Confused

Dear Confused,

My advice is to start a relationship with the guy. Breaking up with your GIRLFRIEND might be hard but you have to do it. Remember, there is nothing a girl can do for you that a guy can't do and more. Lolo

Dear Lolo

I am a freshman here and I live in Tubman Hall. Being a freshman is always not the way it seems. I've grown and matured alot while away from home. I am told that I am a freak; yes I sleep around but only with guys with high authority. I mean guys that I see as most popular on campus like an Omega man, an ioda that just went over, and a president of an organization. I thought I loved the president but in my subconscious I used him. I don't deny any of my excentric feelings of my sexual preference. Please analyze my problem, if it is a problem? My name has been trashed and it's not fair to me unless I can make people see eye to eye with me. I am not a freak; I don't consider myself as being a freak. It's just sometimes I want what I need and need what I want. Called a FREAK.

Dear Freak,

You need to stop what you're doing. Just because a man is in high authority doesn't mean that you should sleep with him. If you continue, at the rate you're going, your name will be more than

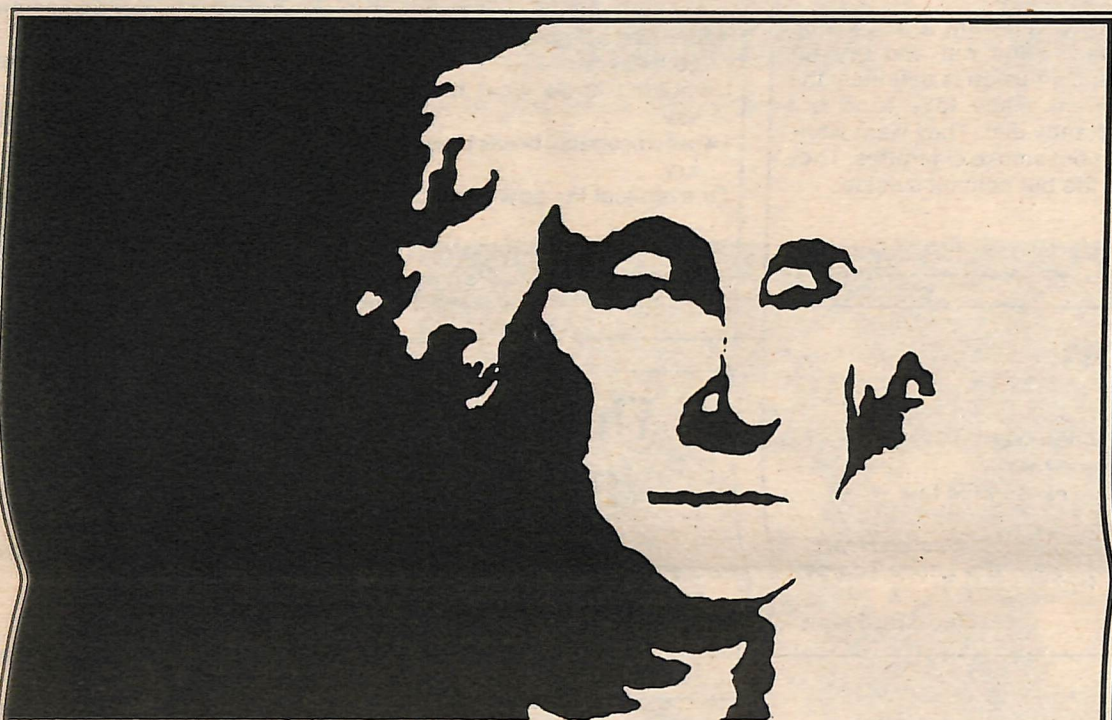

Here's the Scoop!

trashed, YOU WILL BETRASHED! My advice is to take it slow. Play low profile for a while. Your wants have to be controlled. Personally, I don't think you're a freak, you just have an exceptional case of nymphomanie. My advice to you is to seek help.

FAA Recruiting for 3,000 Air Traffic Controller Jobs

to a field facility where the on-the-job training will begin.

Academy graduates may go to one of three different types of facilities: (1) airport control towers, which direct take offs and landings and handle flights in the immediate terminal area; (2) air route traffic control centers, which control aircraft operating under instrument flight rules between airports; and (3) flight service stations, which provide pilots with a variety of services such as briefings on weather and flight conditions.

Overall, FAA operates approximately 328 airport control towers, 24 air route traffic control centers and 275 flight service stations in the United States and its territories.

Depending on their assignment, career progression and other factors, controllers can move up to non-supervisory positions that pay a base salary in the $46,000 to $56,000 range, or even more with overtime and various differentials. Unlike most other government employees, controllers also are eligible for retirement after 20 years.

No previous aviation experience is required of persons applying of these positions. Those who pass the test and meet other qualifications will have their names added to the list of persons eligible for controller jobs.

Each applicant must have three years of work experience, a college degree, or a combination of work and college experience. There also is an upper age limit for those hired to work in control towers and centers. They cannot be more than 30 years of age at the time of appointment. There is no age limit for specialists assigned to flight service stations.

NCAA Study On Student Athletes Included Del State

The American Institutes for Research (AIR) conducted a study of the effects of participation in intercollegiate athletics on student athletes on Tuesday, March 19, at the Science Center.

Forty-two colleges and universities including Delaware State College were selected at random from the conferences for men's athletics at each of the Division 1-A, 1-AA and 1-AAA levels to participate. Independent institutions at the 1-A level were also included on a sampling category.

The study which is sponsored by the President's Commission of the National Athletic Association (NCAA) began surveying in November 1987 of more than 4000 student-athletes and other students from February through May 1988.

According to pamphlets issued to the students involved, the purpose of the study is to represent a unique national picture of the effects of participation in intercollegiate athletics from the student-athlete perspective.

Within each of the 42 institutions, AIR selected at random a group of student-athletes including 30 football players, 10 men's basketball players, 10 women's basketball players, 10 men who have athletic grants in other sports, 10 women who have athletic grants in other sports and 10 participants without athletic grants in other sports. Thirty comparison students who are not athletes but have time-consuming extracurricular activities were also selected.

The pamphlets also stated that these samples will provide an appropriate number and mix of institutions, sports, gender, and races and ethnicities to describe the effects of participation in intercollegiate athletics on Division 1 student-athletes nationwide.

The pamphlets further stated that results of the study will be used by the commission members of the NCAA to help determine whether changes are needed and if so, what they should be.

When approached for more information regarding the survey, AIR representatives would not comment except to say that "all information collected will remain confidential."
